Against the Law

In Pinehurst, N. C., it is against the law for a train to whistle, or a dog to bark after dark. And in Dunn it is unlawful to snore loud enough to disturb your neighbor.

Comfort

On NC 41 is the village of Comfort, N. C. Once the place was so remote, and had such a wretched road leading to it, that it was called Misery. Then came a highway, and people could ride to Misery in comfort. Whereupon the name was changed.

Hell

Talking about names. When you drive along US 17 (The Ocean Highway), and come to Onslow and Jones Counties in North Carolina you will be on the edge of Hell and Purgatory swamps. One time the state forest warden of Onslow County called state headquarters to report a fire raging in Hell. He had a hard time convincing his superiors that he wasn't on a binge. The two swamps are owned by the N. C. Dept. of Public Education and are for sale. Wanta buy a piece of Hell?

THAT'S HOW IT IS...

To understand the problems of farmers in this area you have to get right out in the field with them. And that's how it is! Here is Tide Water's agricultural agent at his job—talking things over.

Through this sort of discussion and by following the advice of the County Agents and the Vocational Agriculture Teachers, farmers in Tide Water territory are diversifying crops, getting better yields, and making more money. The more prosperous the farmers, the better off everybody is—more money, more jobs, better times for all of us.

Tide Water is interested in the problems of all its customers—on the farm, at home, in industry. That's why Tide Water rates today are as low or lower than the average for the entire Atlantic Coast—actually 54.4% lower than the average customer paid in 1933!
