Negro Extension Office Is Nearly Done

The Negro Extension Staff wishes to express extreme gratification for the wholehearted cooperation in erection of a Negro Extension Office, which is nearing completion on the colored school campus in Kenansville.
The plan was initiated by an appropriation of $250, by the County Commissioners. The neighborhood members, principals and teachers all rallied to the effort with banquets, picnics, programs, personal donations, material and labor. A total of $370, was raised in this manner, with an additional $90, by a second appropriation by the County Commissioners, brought about by transferring part of the operation cost into a building item. Interested farmers and veterans gave of their labor in erecting the building. The total cost to this date is $710. We would like to acquaint every Negro farmer with our new location and the type of Agriculture program under way.

University Of N. C. Featured In Nat'l Magazine

The University of North Carolina is featured in the June issue of HOLIDAY as the institution which has earned Chapel Hill the label "Capital of the Southern Mind."
A 4800-word article, written by Jonathan Daniels, describes the University as "a place with an ardor for romance and for reform." Even during Civil War days, says Holiday, the University's combination of "high ideas and hilarity" brought it next-to-largest student enrollment in the country.
The article points out that the University's purpose is people and not merely students.
Of Chapel Hill, the article says: "It is indeed, almost the perfect college village in the sentimental tradition of alumni memory in America. College villages, outside of novels and plays, have a way of getting bigger and bigger as education gets higher and higher. Yet to a remarkable degree, Chapel Hill has escaped the surface damages to the returning old grad's nostalgic expectations."
The estimated production of cattle and calves in N. C. in 1948 was 108 million pounds.
Parking meters were first used in American cities in 1935, when 6 municipalities put them in.
