State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. What should I do to prepare my bees for the winter?

A. See to it that the colony goes into winter with three things -- a good queen, plenty of bees, and ample stores of food (50 to 60 lbs. of honey -- eight to 10 combs or a full shallow super placed on top of the brood chamber). There will be some pollen buried in some of the cells if these combs are part of the brood chamber. Most of the honey should be towards the top so that the bees can move upwards into their food supply during the winter months. If there isn't enough honey in the hive, feed sugar syrup about the latter part of October or first part of November. Weak colonies should be united. Simply set one brood chamber on top of the other, with a sheet of newspaper between. The bees will gnaw away the paper and unite peacefully.

FALL CLEAN-UP ON FARMS URGED

A thorough fall clean-up campaign will do much to reduce the rapidly growing population of insect pests on our farms, says G. D. Jones, entomologist for State College Extension Service.

reached record levels during the past summer and immediate action is needed to reduce next year's crop losses from these sources.

From all indications the number of weevils going into hibernation will be the largest on record. This pest has caused serious losses in many parts of the State. Jones said that destruction of cotton stalks before frost will reduce the number and vigor of the weevils going into hibernation. He urged farmers to plow under, disc, or cut down stalks as soon as picking can be completed.

Recent observations in abandoned tobacco fields show a very high population of flea beetles feeding on the plants. Community cooperation in the destruction of the old stalks and crop residues during the early fall months should be especially helpful in controlling the beetles and many other pests.

Prompt destruction of plants by plowing will kill large numbers of immature forms as well as starve out other Jones asserted.

In many cases he pointed out, fall-seeded cover crops can be planted following fall clean-up operations.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS OFFER SEEDLINGS

Three-quarters of a million tree seedlings have been made available for free distribution to North Carolina 4-H Club members for planting during the coming season. The trees are being donated by the North Carolina Pulp Company of Plymouth and the Champion Paper and Fiber Company of Canton.

Any 4-H Club member may apply for from 1,000 to 5,000 trees for planting on his or her farm provided the parent or guardian approves and furnishes the land for planting. Loblolly pine seedlings will be available to members in Rockingham, Guilford, Davidson, Rowan, Cabarrus, Mecklenburg, Gaston, and all counties east and south of this line. Shortleaf pine seedlings will be available in all counties north and west of this line.

Distribution will be made by the Division of Forestry of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development. The division has prepared application blanks which are being supplied to county agents and forestry extension specialists throughout the State. The completed applications should be mailed to the Forestry Extension Office, State College, Raleigh, where they will be numbered in the order of receipt and filled as long as the supply of trees last.

With a possible future shortage of timber products facing us, it is important that our farmers, especially young farmers, become interested in a program of reforestation. Hundreds of thousands of acres of idle, non-productive land on which trees can be planted without reducing acreage of other crops can now be put to profitable use.

Expert Or Expurgated?

Denver, Oct. 13.—A child feeding expert at the American Dieting association convention offers a new twist on getting Junior to eat his spinach.

The first obstacle to overcome, Dr. E. Neige Todhunter of the University of Alabama said, is suspicion. He recommended that parents take their child to market, let him pick out the spinach personally, pay for it and carry it home.
