ber. Because many counties in the state will be canvassing during the second week of November, and because many others will then be making ready for canvassing, the state CROP Committee of North Carolina has named the week of November 6-13 as CROP Week in North Carolina and has designated November 6 as CROP Sunday.

"On that Sunday churches throughout the state are invited to participate in prayer for those throughout the world who are still suffering as a result of the devastation and disruption of war, and to make known the opportunity which is provided through the Christian Rural Program for alleviating some of that misery through gifts of foods and fibers from their own harvests."

Local CROP organizations have been formed in 49 counties of the state, Ballentine said, and it is hoped that other counties will participate in the program before the end of the harvest season.

Lugs were $1 to $7 stronger and a small quantity of primings gained $5 to $9.

Lower quality offerings resulted in an average of $49.43 per hundred for weekly gross sales totaling $2,252,530 pounds. This average was $1.63 below the previous week with volume around 50% less. Season gross sales amounted to 396,863.199 pounds for an average of $48.75 Actual realies for the season thru September were 9.9% of gross sales.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. How is Turkish tobacco harvested and cured?

A. Approximately 50 days after the plant is transplanted the first two to five leaves, above the planted leaves, are ready for picking. The Turkish plant is not topped; so topping and suckering is eliminated. The field should be pruned over once each four to eight days until all the leaves are harvested. By the time the plant blooms out and a few dead flowers appear, all the remaining leaves to the top of the stalk are ready to prime. Turkish leaves are at their best, for both quality and maximum weight when they are mature and the glossy green has just faded to a dull green color. They should not turn yellow on the stock.

The tobacco is wilted in a cool, well-ventilated shed for approximately two days before it is rolled out into the sun for curing.

Q. Should pullets and old hens be housed together?

A. No.

Q. How many nests should be provided for laying hens?

A. One nest for each five hens.
