AMERICA

Small cities have grown and once built-up communities have crumbled. President has followed President into the White House. Administrations have changed. Yet in all the years since first our Star Spangled Banner was sung, no other melody and words have rivalled it as our national anthem. It is the birthright of every child born within our boundaries—it is the heritage every parent can bestow in certainty that so long as it is sung loud and clear by Americans, democracy will live and prosper.
