Candlelight At Christmas

It's Christmas time once again
And our hearts swell with joy
At the sight of the happy faces
Of every little girl and boy.

The Christmas tree has been up
For almost a week it seems;
And large red-ribboned boxes
Have been in all our dreams.

Holly, mistletoe, and scented pine,
Just don't seem to make Christmas right;
Unless, there is added to them all,
Th faint, flickering candlelight.

The dim, dancing shadows sway,
As the flame of the candle is blown
By a sudden, passing gust
That comes from an unknown.

In the room filled with happy faces,
Awaiting the opening of the gifts on Christmas night,
Is seen the bubbling joy from the heart,
That overflows in the candlelight.

Only the dim, dull lustre of candlelight,
Could bring forth such a radiance;
As they let their eyes dance in wine
That made them drunk with joy and brilliance.

Eyes, all aglow and sparkling,
As the candle's flame, they reflect,
For a moment so fleeting,
Not a worry, are you able to detect.

Flames of red, gold and orange
Dance up the chimney from the fireplace
And pass out as puffs of grey smoke,
To float into endless space.

Nothing can hold more allurements
Than the romantic candlelight,
As the rhythm of shadows
Is observed on continuous flight.

The dull dim of the light,
Only helps to increase the holiday feeling
Which can be captured only once a year
When the shadows caper on the ceiling.

Christmas is the time for honoring,
The One who brought into the world, a pure love
And along with our merry-making,
We should remember to praise our Almighty Maker above.

So as it is again Christmas time,
Let us think of that long ago Christmas night
And again read that age old story,
As it is enhanced by the enchantment of candlelight.
