DUPLIN NEGROES ENDORSE FARM BUREAU NEGRO GROUP

Duplin County Negro farmers were among the thousand or more members who reasserted their belief in the organization at the second annual State-wide conference of the Farm Bureau's Negro membership at A. and T. College. Before the sessions ended the gathering agreed with State President A. C. Edwards of Hookerton that the "Farmer must have a voice others can hear - he must speak in a collective way today or he won't be heard - he must protect his interest through organization."

Key speaker John C. Lynn, assistant director of the American Farm Bureau office in Washington, highlighted the business program with an assault on the Brannan proposal. The State Farm Bureau received his congratulations for its success in organizing Negro farmers. North Carolina is the only state in the country where Negro Farm Bureau have their own annual convention, Lynn told the audience. R. Flake Shaw, executive vice president, urged the group to cooperate with the neighbors and seek always to arrive at a mutual understanding. He told the farmers it is their duty to set a standard of a healthy agriculture.

A. W. Solomon of Greensboro, State Negro Field representative, outlined goals for the 1950 Negro membership.
