ROSE HILL BOY

 stitute does its utmost in cooperation. "He is very intelligent and cooperative," says Dr. Cailliet, as if basic for any appraisal. Dr. Dorothy Gill, former Institute physician, comments on his mental alertness. Despite handicaps, he has read considerably, and his coordination of mind and his general comprehension are unusual.

Mrs. Helen Rodgers, physical therapist working with the youth, says she observes many little improvements contributing the final end for which they are working. She notes "He can now sit up by himself better, feed himself better and can even wheel his chair a bit. He is such a nice boy—I'd give almost anything to make him well—all of us have worked extra hard with him—and he can now look to the future with more anticipation."

A nonprofit institution without endowment, the Kabat-Kaiser Institute was set up in 1946 by Dr. Herman Kabat, noted neuromuscular specialist, and Henry J. Kaiser, Sr., the latter a West Coast industrialist, whose son, Henry J., Jr., was the second patient treated for multiple sclerosis by Dr. Kabat. Incidentally, the former Kaiser patient now works on a rigid daily schedule as manager of the Kaiser-Frazier Assembly Plant in California. The three Institute treatment centers are supervised by Dr. Kabat, he personally directing the two on the West Coast, at Vallejo and Oakland, California, and Dr. Cailliet directing the one located in the embassy section of Sixteenth Street, Washington, D. C.

In an article on the subject, Dr. Kabat explains, "Power and endurance must be increased, not only in the muscle but through the entire nervous pathway." Muscles are re-educated and strengthened. Under supervision of specially trained physicians, patients follow a five-day week regime of physical and occupational therapy and gymnasium activity. Medicine is sometimes prescribed as an adjunct to treatment.

On Saturdays and Sundays and on other days when classes are over, the patients, who come from many states and foreign countries, assemble in wheel chairs in the lobby for planned recreational programs or for talk. Attendees pass almost unnoticed and, sometimes, family attendants are present. In these gatherings it is often, "Hi there, Teachey", for the Duplin lad, with a princely dignity, innately gracious, is extremely well liked.

At these times patients from the states may chat with the young boy and girl from Palestine, the citizen from Sweden, the 12-year-old boy from Turkey, or members of the Canadian and South American groups. In a few cases patients have met, fallen in love and married, while others returned home to find romance. A few days ago the patients were together for a tour of Washington scenes, which included views of the famed cherry blossoms.

In the brightly touched-up recreation room, decorated in part with shining articles made in occupational therapy classes, patients hold weekly sessions of the "K.K.I."—their own social club which they organized and manage. Hearty, tall Joe Doshen, freem WeETAONIN Joe Doshen, former West Virginia coal miner, the outgoing club president, had his guitar and his songs. On eve of leaving the Institute last week to learn a trade, he exhibited his recovered walking skills. Miss Martha Monroe, head therapist, then observed, "Watch, the Army will get you now!" Newly-elected president of the club is Emidio Velone of the state of New York, who is the big-brother roommate of Welford Teachey.

On Sunday evenings there are religious services conducted by different leaders, for many creeds are represented in the roster of patients. On a recent Saturday evening a church group from the city provided an inspirational program and in the party were some of Welford's acquaintances and friends.

Just last week Welford had reason to be proud, when the Honorable Clyde R. Hoey, esteemed senior Senator and former Governor of North Carolina, visited him at the Institute. The Institute felt the honor of the visit, too.

Washington friends hope that aid will continue to come to this bright eastern Carolina youth in his struggle for rehabilitation, enabling him to use hidden talents now imprisoned in his stricken body. Recently he sent home to his mother the first letter he ever wrote with his own hands.

His entrance into the Institute was financed largely by interested persons, civic organizations, church groups—starting in the neighboring towns of Rose Hill and Wallace. His devoted parents have done much, it is also understood.

Hope where there was none—a chance to face life! "They put faith in us, but they also put faith in Someone higher than us, and consequently, the combination will get them further," affirms Dr. Cailliet. Welford and other Institute patients have this sort of faith and their friends have it for them.

Truly, Welford and his Institute comrades wear the warrior's plumed helmet of courage (Edit. Note: Miss Johnson asks if there are any funds available in Duplin to help finance young Teachey's expenses? Anyone who wishes to make a small donation to the cause please send your contribution to Miss Beale F. Johnson, 1469 Euclid Ave., N. W., Washington 9, D. C., or send it to The Duplin Times. Miss Johnson is a native of Rose Hill and former correspondent for The Duplin Times.)

GRAHAM CITES

 and facilities for marketing perishable produce.

"I have championed and will continue to champion the present agricultural price support program," Graham stated. "The principle of this program is a principle of equity. The prices the farmer receives in the market place should be kept in fair relation to the prices the farmer pays in the market place. The present agricultural program has been tested over a period of 16 years. In spite of some defects, it has proved itself of value to the nation in bringing to a more equitable level the income of farmers with all its meaning to our general prosperity."

Senator Graham said the real issue lies "between the maintenance of the present price support program and its destruction by powerful forces mobilizing to destroy it."

"I have joined with agricultural leaders in the Senate to beat back the impending attack upon the agricultural parity price program," he added.

Graham said he was glad to join Vice-President Barkley and Speaker Sam Rayburn in urging President Truman not to veto the bill for adjustment of inequities in cotton acreage allotments. He recalled that he had introduced a bill for himself and Senator Hoey which would provide that the Virginia-Carolina type of peanut and other types of peanuts should stand on their own merits in acreage allotments. A similar bill has been introduced in the House by Congressman Abbott of Virginia.

Graham congratulated the people of Duplin County for "The Duplin Story" which dramatized the traditions and history of this region.

State Commissioner of Agriculture L. Y. Ballentine also addressed the festival visitors, praised this strawberry region and cited needs of North Carolina agriculture.

DISTRICT REPORT

 B. F. Grady had the largest attendance with 80 at one meeting and over 100 at another.

One of the achievements of which Duplin is most proud, has been her growth in leaders participation during the past year. Attendance at County Council has just about doubled. At the January Council meeting, 24 of the 27 County Clubs were represented.

Last July when the women of the county were in their very busy season, 20 clubs were represented at a call meeting, at which time Mrs. McAllister, District Agent, presented the Plan of Work.

The women are carrying the Demonstrations the months that the Agents do not meet with the clubs. At a Training School the first of February, all leaders except three came into Kenansville for their training school. A Training School for County Project Leaders is planned for the near future. At this school each project Leader plans to make a list of things that she hopes to put across this year.

Duplin County was very proud of one of her club members, Mrs. Garland King of the Tin City Club, who taught a class on making Candlewick bedspreads at the Farm and Home Week last August. Mrs. King taught over 300 women in her classes.

Last year the County Council voted to give a Home Demonstration Club pin to each woman who did not miss a club meeting during the year. In November at the Achievement Day, 82 pins were presented for perfect attendance. This plan is to be followed again this next year.

A number of the club women are writing to pen friends in other lands and by this are hearing more about how the rest of the world lives. Mrs. Lehman Williams read a most interesting letter at the January Council meeting which she had received from a woman in Germany thanking her for a fruit cake that she had sent for Christmas.

There are 5 club houses in the county. The Penny Branch Club put a new roof, new steps and painted their house in 1949, and hope to put in running water in 1950.

The women of Duplin are looking forward to increasing their membership in 1950, and in January of this year added 91 new members toward the State Goal of 100 new members per county.

BRIEF 4-H REPORT FOR DUPLIN COUNTY 1950
 Duplin County at present has 17 4-H clubs with an enrollment of 888 girls. These members include a Junior 4-H Club that was organized in the Warsaw Grammar School in January 1950, which now means there is at least one club in every school in the county with the exception of one.

An important accomplishment of the 4-H clubs of the county in 1949 was the reorganization of the 4-H County Council, which had been dead for a number of years.

At all club meetings, the members are responsible for all programs given during the joint session of girls and boys, and frequently in addition to the regular program, a 4-H member will give a demonstration on some phase of clothing, good grooming or social etiquette.

As a special feature for the Achievement Day Program, the 4-H movie "The Green Promise" was shown.

CLUB MEETING DAY

I always know when it's time for club,
 For, Oh how Mom does work,
 She dusts and scrubs and sweeps the rooms
 And chases all the dirt.

For every place must be just so,
 When ladies come to call,
 With lovely flowers in each room
 And pictures on the wall.

And how my manners I must watch,
 To do everything just so,
 To sit or stand as all ladies should,
 And speak when spoken to.

The punch must always be just right,
 So rich, so sweet and clear;
 And every cookie brown and crisp,
 When Mom has club meeting here.

personal as possible about your troubles. Ask yourself, "How would this big worry look to me if it wasn't my headache?"

2. Cultivate a sense of humour. Lions hate to be laughed at. A good laugh often makes them slink away.
3. Lastly stop depending on yourself alone to banish the lions. You don't hesitate to call for help if you break an arm, or get your car stalled in a snowdrift, or find your house on fire. Now, do you? Ditto for those raging lions of fear and doubt. Don't depend on your vain and foolish ego. If you are having trouble with those lions of yours, don't hesitate to call on our Maker who has said, "Knock and it shall be opened to you; Seek and ye shall find." Together with God you can chain them and set yourself free.
