Fontana Village, N. C. - May 10—Perhaps the most unusual fish story on record for TVA lakes so far is yesterday's catch, a 19-lb., 41-inch Muskalunge, brought out of Twenty-mile Creek at Cheoah Lake, near Fontana Village by Mrs. Doris Lambdin, guest of the resort. The catch was made on a copper spoon trout lure, with a 15-lb test line, 8-lb test leader, Bamboo casting rod.

"The Muskalunge has been native to the Little Tennessee River, but there is no record of one having been caught in any of the reservoirs since TVA dams were built," said Dr. R. W. Eschmeyer of Norris, fishery investigator for TVA. "We have checked the age of this fish and find that it is 7 years old. The Muskalunge grows much faster here than in the North, and this one shows very good growth."
Mrs. Lambdin and her husband, Dr. L. D. Lambdin, St. Petersburg, Fla., are visiting Fontana Village for the fourth consecutive season. The Florida fisherman held last season's Fourth of July record with a 23-inch, 5 1-2 lb Rainbow trout, out of Hazel Creek, Fontana Lake.
The former Miss Rose Maxwell, will join him there later. She has been employed by a local insurance agency. Mr. and Mrs. Watlington have many friends here who regret to see them leave and especially will the churches miss Mr. Watlington who has so willingly aided them in their musical programs.

sheer fabrics are in the spotlight for summer clothes. Yard goods counters are offering a greater variety of sheers than in many a year -- in cotton, rayon, nylon and silk, with many old favorites to choose from including dimity, dotted Swiss, organdie, chiffon, voile, and tissue gingham. These materials are ideal for this year's very feminine styles, either soft drapes or crisp full skirts.
In making up these fabrics extra seam allowance is needed. Crease-resistant voiles, for example, are wiry and fray badly, thus to hold securely need seams from 1-4 to 3-8 inches deep when finished. Darts and waistline seams should not be cut downwards because of the danger of fraying. French seams generally are best because they are the least conspicuous, but at armholes it may pay to bind seams with a bias fold of the material for durability.

Sheers are so light and delicate that they have a way of getting out-of-hand, slipping and stretching when cutting the pattern. To avoid this, use one of the new cutting boards to which the fabric can be pinned. Or pin the fabric to heavy smooth paper.
When stitching by machine, prevent puckering of material by basing it to strips of tissue paper. After stitching the paper is easily pulled off. Set the machine for about 16 to 18 stitches per inch for delicate fabrics and tighten the pressure screw at the top. Use a fine needle -- size 11 at least.
Slip under Sheers -- Should be the same color of dress to have the "right" look. Your slip is sure to show -- show through, that is -- when you wear a dress of sheer fabric. Slips that match dresses in color are very much the thing this year -- a navy blue slip under a navy dress, or a grey slip under a grey dress. Be sure the slip comes down to the hem of the dress and hangs evenly all around to avoid unsightly gaps. Plain slips look best under figured or fancy sheers. Dressy slips may be worn under plain sheers.
