'A LOOKIN' UP

By: A. M. DAVIS

During the past few weeks I have talked with several farmers from this area who were interested in some kind of corn storage facilities for this community. This is something sorely needed not only for the corn that may be offered for sale but that which the farmer expects to use in his own feeding.

This part of the state seems to be more susceptible to weevil infestation than some parts of the country and adequate drying and storage seems to be the only solution for us.

Our government is installing a number of storage bins throughout the state but none of them are near enough to us to help with our problem. Duplin county is one of the largest corn growing counties in the state yet the nearest bins are approximately 50 miles away. I think we were asleep and just did not ask for them as we should have done. Or, maybe those who selected the places for them to be built thought that the large bins being built in Wilson would take care of us. If they did they were wrong in their way of thinking. We need drying and storage here in Duplin County.

Last fall I bought corn for the mill for as little as 90 cents per bushel in the shuck. Most of it was not good corn. It was too wet for storage after it was shelled. If an attempt was made to store it and it did not rot the weevils would infest it very fast and make it unfit for milling purposes. I did not have a drier and the best I could do was give 90 cents for the corn and use all I could before it spoiled and sell all I could for what I could get for it to the mills in the western part of the state. They ground it as soon as possible and shipped it back to us in feed at a much higher price than we received for it.

All of us realize that this is not a healthy situation.

Anybody with a thimble full of brains realizes that a farmer cannot make corn and sell it for 90 cents with fertilizer and labor the price it is now. We have got to try and work out some plan to take care of the surplus corn at a fair price and also be able to store corn for stock feeding without taking the loss that has been customary in the past few years.

Farmers in this area, at the present time, whenever they are able to locate local corn, are paying $2 per bushel for it for feeding purposes. The local corn they are buying is weevil eaten and the rats have not been doing it any good at all. With the increase in price of hogs that is not profitable to the feeder. We have got to work out some plan to keep our own corn and feed it to livestock or sell it when prices are favorable.

We might be able to persuade government officials that ours is a favorable location for a corn drying and storage plant. But, I am not so sure this would be the best plan. We are getting to much into government control and regulations. It would be much better if the farmers could own something of their own here and be able to control it as they saw fit. They could borrow from the government and sell to the government, if that was the profitable way to do, or if individuals or the local mills offered a better price they could sell to them. Very few of the small mills have adequate storage and this would be an asset to them.

What I think would be a good plan to set such a plan into a reality was offered by a farmer several days ago. He sell about 1000 bushels of corn each year and also feeds a lot of stock. A farmer need not be a 1000 bushel farmer to have a part in the plan he offered.

His plan was to get estimates on the cost of grain drying and storage plants of say 25,000, 50,000 and 75,000 capacities. Then find out how much of the cost the government would loan toward the plant if the farmers of this area would finance the balance. The cost to the farmers could be figured down to the cost per bushel storage. Then a farmer could buy the number of bushels storage he would expect to use each year. Then he would have his drying and storage facilities here for a set number of bushels and it would be belong to him.

In order to retire the government loan the farmer would pay the regular charges for drying and storage to the plant each year. A board of directors would be appointed by the farmer owners from their group to select the manager and keep track of all operations of the plant.

If the farmers were fortunate and the plant was a success the government loan would be paid off in a few years. Then the plant would belong to the subscribing farmers and after the operation costs were paid the profits would be divided and distributed to the owners in the form of dividends.

I think this was an excellent suggestion but the main thing now is how could we get a man or several men to work out the plan and put it into operation. The farmers have got to see the opportunity such a plan offers themselves and try to work it out for themselves. I believe some of the people in town would help if a move was started toward such a project and I feel sure the agriculture workers would offer all the help and suggestions they could.

It is up to us. We have a good corn crop prospect this year and if the war does not continue until harvesting time I predict that the

Noted Methodist Missionary To Speak Faison Methodist Charge

The Rev. Ernie Kilbourne, recently returned missionary from Communist occupied China, will be the guest minister at the churches of the Faison Methodist charge during their Missionary Emphasis Week, beginning Tuesday night and lasting through Friday night, July 21, reports Rev. D. F. Kinlaw, pastor of the charge.

Services are scheduled to begin at eight o'clock each night. The appointments are as follows: Keener Methodist Church, Tuesday night, July 18;

Faison Methodist Church, Wednesday night, July 19;

Goshen Methodist Church, Thursday night, July 20;

Epworth Methodist Church of the Clinton Charge, Friday night, July 21.

Mr. Kilbourne, world traveler and oriental missionary, is well qualified to speak on the subject of the week, "The Challenge of Christian Missions."

Having been brought in a home where both the parents and grandparents were missionaries under the Orienta Missionary Society, he spent his childhood and early youth in the Orient. He was born in Tokyo, Japan. He also lived in Korea and China.

After finishing his high school training in Seoul, Korea, he came to America and received his A. B. degree from Asbury College and his B. D. from Asbury Seminary.

He served a Methodist pastorate in Ohio for a short time before he returned to the Orient, this time to serve as a missionary to China under the O. M. S.

Mr. Kilbourne will arrive in Faison Saturday night and be guest in the home of Rev. and Mrs. Kinlaw both of whom were his college classmates. He will assist Mr. Kinlaw with the Sunday services at Goshen and Keener.
