'I'm Looking For Freedom'
I'm never content to rest.
I'm forever looking toward a farther star;
Always searching for you, Freedom,
Trying to find out where you are.

One night spent in Georgia,
The next night in Carolina;
Always journeying onward, onward,
Freedom, I'm trying you to find.

On me, no state has a right.
I'm connected by no tie,
Though born in North Carolina,
There's no telling where I'll die.

Happy to be in the mountain's loneliness
Content, but only for a moment to stay,
Then leaving, to be pressing on,
Ere it finds me here on another day.

Through the valley, I search farther
Thinking, maybe by chance to find you there,
But search proves only hopeless
For you, Freedom, none but I seems to care.

Finally, walking onto the sands of the seashore
Swept by the ocean's undying waves,
There I ask of you, Freedom,
To be answered by the echoes of the sea caves.

I look out upon the blue beyond
And on the horizon, I see faintly another star.
"Oh, my dear beloved Freedom,
tell me,
Could that be where you are?"

— Marcia M. Scott.
