Teacher Pay Smells Of Politics Refuse Role Of "Political Football"

by SCOTT SUMMERS

Raleigh, N. C., August 31.—The state's school teachers have refused -- up to now -- to be used as a political football in the bonus pay row.

When the State ended the last fiscal year with $13,000,000 in the cash box, the teachers asked for a pay raise authorized by the last General Assembly "if there was a surplus". Teachers claimed the 13 million was surplus, the governor and Advisory Budget Commission said it wasn't -- that the money was needed for this year's operations.

The teachers asked the Governor to reconsider, and asked him to submit the question to Attorney General Harry McMullan for an opinion.

Meantime, the question had evolved into an administration vs anti-administration fight. The "antis" -- usually conservative as a Scotsman with a mortgage -- hollered to pay the $6,000,000 now and some urged to teachers to tinct are dwindling steadily. Almost 60 per cent of the existing one-teacher schools have been replaced since 1920 through substantial school construction and modernization programs reports R. H. Jacobs, director of the school division of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company. His report was based on an analysis of a study by the U. S. Office of Education.

Although educators regard this as a significant index of state-wide advancement there are some 595 one-teacher schools remaining in the state that continue to be an important means of providing the rudiments of education.

North Carolina educators, however, apparently are keenly aware of the physical advantages of larger schools. In a recent survey, a majority stated the "ideal elementary school" should contain 14 class rooms, and 69 per cent of those replying said they would specify individual room thermostats for control of heating and ventilating equipment.

Southern schools have a singular problem in providing correct classroom atmosphere, since cooling, rather than heating, is necessary most of the year.

"But," one teachers' spokesman said, "we know they are not usually on the teachers' side. They wanted to get the money paid out in the hope that this would cause a deficit. A deficit would have a two-fold aim -- discrediting the administration and making the teachers the goat, so that it would be almost impossible for us to get anything done for the teachers in the future. A deficit would cause a state-wide salary cut for all state employees, and the teachers -- naturally -- would be blamed.

"So, although we still feel that we are entitled to payment of the pay raise now, we are not going to push for it."

The question submitted by the teachers for an opinion by the attorney general was the tipoff. It was expected that the question would be "is there a surplus now", and a report had circulated in Raleigh that McMullan was ready to answer yes.

But the teachers asked, instead, "can the pay raise be retroactive to July 1, 1949" and McMullan answered yes.

McMullan's opinion merely carbon-copied the action of the governor and Advisory Budget Commission. The last two paragraphs of the statement issued when they refused a teacher pay raise now pledged that the payments would be retroactive at the

Use Care In Lifting Says County Agent

"Correct lifting should be practiced until it becomes a habit," commented L. F. Weeks, today. Each year thousands are victims of sprains, strains, hernias and other injuries caused by improper lifting.

The most common causes of lifting injuries are lifting and lowering with the back muscles instead of the leg muscles; insecure grip or footing and unsafe placing of hands or feet; using quick, jerking, twisting or awkward movements of the body; obstructed vision, unstable loads or inadequate control; insufficient help or failure to use mechanical aids.

Nature intended each bone joint and muscle for a specific purpose. When overloaded or used improperly, injuries are invited.
