

New Industry Invests Over $100 Million In N. C.; Wallace Gets $2 Million Plant

Raleigh, N. C. — Thirty-one new manufacturing industries selected North Carolina sites for plant investments of $104,900,000 in 1950, Paul Kelly, head of the Divisions of Commerce and Industry of the State Department of Conservation and Development, revealed in a survey of the State's rapid increase in industrial capacity during the year.

Kelly estimated that the new industries would employ 9,715 workers and have annual payrolls totaling $24,739,000. No additions or improvements to existing plants, nor new buildings by public utilities are included in these figures.

Textile establishments predominate, but with diversification in this field among cotton, synthetics and woolen divisions. Other new industries locating in North Carolina range from electronics to furniture.

Principal new industries for the State, which already leads the nation in the production of textiles, wooden furniture and tobacco, with announced or estimated value, include:

Frank Ix & Sons, Burlington, $1,000,000 weaving plant; Riegel Paper Co., Acme, $13,500,000 pulp plant; J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc., Wallace, $2,000,000 fabrics plant; Western Electric Co., Greensboro, $1,500,000 electronic equipment plant; Burlington Mills Corp., Lillington, $5,000,000 textile plant; Belding Hemingway, Inc., Hendersonville, nylon and orlon thread, $2,000,000; Robbins Mills, Inc., Raeford, textile plant estimated at more than $10,000,000.

E. I. DuPont de Nemours Co., Kinston, $24,000,000 plant for manufacture of "Fibre V"; Deering Milliken Co., Columbus, $2,000,000 woolen plant; Copland-Fowler Industries, Inc., Hopedale, $1,500,000 lingerie; Empire Manufacturing Co.,

Statesville, $1,500,000 textile plant; Kroehler Manufacturing Co., Charlotte, $600,000 furniture plant; Mexican Petroleum Corp., Wilmington, $3,500,000 oil refinery; Woonsocket Falls Mills, Wilmington, $3,500,000 textile plant.

What Do You Think About Timber?

Timberland owners, wood-using industrialists and other interested persons will have the opportunity, in the near future to help formulate recommendations to be made to the 1951 General Assembly concerning a long range forestry program for North Carolina, it was announced today by W. S. Edmunds, Executive Director of the N. C. Forestry Association.

This statement was released along with an announcement that the Board of Directors of the Association will hold an open hearing in Raleigh on January 4th to discuss the merits of recommendations contained in a report recently by the N. C. Forestry Council.

Edmunds said recommendations submitted indicate that very careful study has been made of the problems involved and agreed that recommendations appear to be well founded. He stated, however, that certain recommendations may be more or less controversial and inasmuch as several points require legislative action and will have far-reaching effects, the Board felt that non-members of the Association as well as members should have an opportunity to register an opinion.

The hearing will be held in the Raleigh Room of the Sir Walter Hotel at 10 A. M. Thursday, January 4th. In the meantime any persons desiring a copy of "The Long Range Forestry Plan" for study may obtain it without cost by addressing the N. C. Forestry Association, P. O. Box 14, Wanaiah, N. C.

State College Hints To Home Makers

A test for Christmas tree freshness before buying is to shake the tree to see if any needles fall. If so, the tree is dry and will soon lose its looks and become a nuisance in the house.

A fresh tree that gets water will keep its color and fragrance and look alive. As soon as the tree is brought home, throw cold water all over it. Then cut off the but end about an inch slantwise to open the pores for drawing up water. Set the freshly cut end in water, and keep the tree in a cool shady place until it comes in-doors for trimming. Replenish water daily.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

If you like guns and have the eye mark of the collector's instinct branded on you, you might consider combining interest and instinct and setting yourself up in the gun collecting game.

It's amazing how many people are interested in old guns, as you soon realize when you start looking over the list of gun books which have been published in recent years. A large percentage of them are books on the history of particular types or on old guns in general and are not concerned with shooting at all.

How much would it cost you to make a good antique gun collection? That's between you and your purse. According to gun expert Jim Crossman, most guns are under $100 with the majority around $25 or less.

If you want to get into the game without investing too much money you can always keep a weather eye open for odds and ends of guns in pawnshops, gun stores, attics and so on. Even though some of them may not be in good shape, if you have a bit of spare time and mechanical ability, you can make them look almost as good as new. Of course, you don't want to overdo that look-in-as-good-as-new business because some of the virtue of an old gun lies in the fact that it looks old.

If you are not interested in collecting guns, you might then consider the matter of collecting ammunition. In its way that field is just as intriguing as the gun field.

Some collectors limit their efforts to old cartridges while others stick strictly to modern stuff, of which you can get a pretty good assortment if you include both commercial and military types of ammunition.

Or maybe you don't want to be fussy, in which case you can combine the two. But don't say I didn't warn you. Once you get started on this collection business you'll find it hard to leave alone.

Donald Brown, Hazel Garris, Bill Gregg, Mary Jackson

Overriding membership in club and community brought state honors to Hazel Garris, 15, of Wrensboro. A 4-H'er for seven years, Hazel has served as junior leader since 1944 and has completed 25 projects in home economics, garden and poultry. Actively participating in community programs she is called upon often to lead revision, give talks and make demonstrations. She has given 122 talks and written 61 news stories. In 1949 she was selected to represent her state at National 4-H Camp in Washington, D. C. A handsome gold watch appropriately inscribed was presented to her by Edward Four Wilson, president of Wilson and Company.

Bill Gregg, 17, of Greensboro. All of these activities are conducted under the direction of the Extension Service of the State Agricultural College and USDA cooperating.

From the original design to the finished garment has proved both fascinating and rewarding to Mary Jackson, 15, of Mt. Airy, who was judged winner in the Dress Make program. She wore a navy wool gabardine bolero suit with detachable white plique collar and cuffs. With this she wore a white silk blouse and added color to the outfit with a red cummerbund and a cluster of carnations pinned at the throat. She wore a white blouse and carried gloves, navy pumps and carried a drawing navy purse. Mary has served in several offices in her club. In recognition of her abilities, Simplicity Pattern Co. sent her to the Chicago Club Congress—all expenses paid.
