Manh, who is general manufactor of the Farmers Cooperative Exchange and the N. C. Cotton Growers As-sociation, said the average Tar Heel farmer's income stills inves much to be desired even though farm prices have taken a turn for the better in post-war years. Last week the Revenue Depart-ment reported that out of 200,000 income tax returns filed in 1946, farmers turned in only 10,248. Latest available figures show that 42 per cent ,or almost half, of North Carolina's farm popula-tion is composed of tenants and sharecroppers, usually a low in-toome group, the Raleigh farm lead-er said. er said.

er said. At the same time, Mann added, land holdings among individual farm owners are comparatively small, the average farm in this state having under cultivation less than 25 acres.

"When we consider these fac-tors," the co-op manager declared, "we can see why the net income of North Carolina farmers is small, We must not overlook, either, the great rise in production costs since the close of World War Two. Farthe close of world war two, sat-mers now are paying much more for their fertilizer, seed, and other supplies needed to turn out crops and livestock. At the same time, farm commodity prices have not in-creased in the same supportion.

farm commonly prices have not in creased in the same proportion". Mann said there may be some cases of farmers failing to file in-come tax returns when they should but for the most part, "itt's a case of not making enough money to file.'

He said further: "The farmer h businessman in the same way a srchant, for instance, is. If a busi business
