In Memoriam

HINSON — In loving memory of our dear sister, Lula May Hinson, who departed this life June 23, 1950, we quote a poem by another dear sister, Estelle Elizabeth Hinson, who passed away Feb. 5, 1930.

Coat the dear birds to gather 'round our door
With generous crumbs of kindness scattered o'er
The good, brown earth.
And if in riotous notes of joy they sing
Right pleased I'll be at that sweet sound of revelry.
They sing of all that's glad, to you, for me.

I talked with Mrs. Herbert Brock...

Editor's note: The following story was written by Helen White of Louisville, Ky., 15 year old grand daughter of Mrs. Taid Jones in Kenansville. Helen writes the story following a recent visit to her grandmother here.

The heavy twilight seemed to fall majestically over the sleepy little town in which I was visiting. From my window I could dimly see giant moss that weighted their tired, ancient branches to the sandy cart. Pink crepe myrtles and stately magnolia trees gave me the feeling of dwelling in the deep south.

Yes, this town was the home of my grandmother. This was the house where I had visited summer after summer since the earliest days of my childhood. I could visualize so well the beautiful sights surrounding it that I could almost see the yellow butterflies darting back and forth among the honeysuckle vines. When viewing the side of our yard I could see white trellises, heavily laden with lush, glowing bunches of purple grapes. Their wonderful fragrance would linger in my mind all through the cold winter until spring and my next visit here.

This was the last night of my visit tomorrow we would be leaving on our long, tiresome journey North and leaving behind all the loveliness of this little village. Tonight was the end of an "almost perfect visit". Almost perfect but something was missing just one thing. As now I realize what that was, the visit to the village spring. All through these many years the spring had never ceased its original task of bringing water to the village people. There was also an old historical story told about this spring which I had waited many years to hear. Last summer my grandmother finally promised to tell me the story during my next visit. How could I have so carelessly forgotten about her wonderful promise? I hoped, oh how I hoped, that grandmother would walk with me to the spring tonight and tell me the long promised story.

I shall never, never as long as I live, forget that night. The coarse sand which had been so blinding earlier in the day now felt cool and soothing to my bare feet. As the moon slowly rose in the darkening sky, the village produced hidden treasures that were unknown to daytime with all of its perplexity and confusion.

When we reached the spring, grandmother and I filled our cups and drank the cool, refreshing water. I didn't have to beg or even ask her to tell me the long-promised story in my eyes she seemed to see the story in my very expression.

"The story began, as all good stories do, 'Once upon a time.' In her own words she told this story. Many years ago there lived a group of people in England who were persecuted and killed because of their everlasting faith and love of God. Soon small groups of them began to venture out and leave England. They sailed for the free and perfect land — America.

Now there happened to be a very small group that left England hoping to sail to Roanoke Island in America where their families and friends had already landed. But, by mistake, they missed the island and sailed several miles up the Cape Fear River. They then traveled inward upon land until they came upon what they thought would make a perfect settlement.

They had arrived in the springtime and this spot was the most beautiful that could be imagined. The clear blue sky looking down

Other speakers for the morning and their topics are Dr. Korp of the State Teachers College, Patterson, N. J. A Plan for Special Education in Public Schools and Miss Hill, Hearing, A Community affair Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. Phyllis Lunde, speech consultant, Knox county, Tenn., visiting faculty member, will discuss "Understanding the Problems of Cerebral Palsied."

2 From Duplin Complete Course

Two men from Duplin County have successfully completed their 14 weeks infantry training with "Tank" Company, 28th Regiment of the famed 8th Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S. C.

They are Private Leslie Edison Pate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leslie Pate, Route 2, and Private Eugene Thomas Beavers, brother of Miss Mattie Beavers, Route 1, Mount Olive.

Private Pate is a graduate of Calypso high school. He entered the service last March. Private Beavers graduated from Mount Olive High school. He was self-employed in Mount Olive prior to his induction in the Army last March.

During their 14-weeks infantry training, these men fired most of the light weight infantry weapons, engaged in practical squad and platoon problems, and underwent instruction for duty as a combat or service type replacement.

Shortage of Experienced Tobacco Hands Expected in Duplin Area

Clay B. Rich, manager of the Goldsboro office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission, stated recently that the Wayne-Duplin area is expecting a shortage of experienced tobacco hands for the coming season with experienced workers expected to be the number one shortage.

Rich said that his office has about 500 persons listed now who would be able to help harvest tobacco, but that it is hard to place them so far ahead, because of other possible commitments on the part of the workers in the interim. He added, however, that John M. McLean, farm placement officer in the local office, will be available to farmers to help them secure the necessary workers.

Rich said that his office has already begun receiving inquiries from farmers regarding the hiring of tobacco hands.

Southern Baptists Oppose Union

SAN FRANCISCO — The Southern Baptist Convention opposes amalgamation with other faiths. Some 15,000 delegates at the five-day convocation adopted a committee report opposing organized movements for Protestant unity.

Duplin 4-H'ers In Camp This Week

Duplin County 4-H'ers left Kenansville Monday morning, June 23 at 9:00 a. m. for a week at Millstone Rocks 4-H Camp. This camp is located about 12 miles from Rockingham. Campers are from Hertford and Lee counties, making a total of about 140 campers.

Attending as leaders are Miss Sylvia Davis of Warsaw, Miss Elsie Lawson of Orrum and Adon Quinn of Magnolia. Miss Alta Lawson, HD Agent and Mr. V. H. Reynolds, Assistant Farm Agent, also accompanied the group from Duplin.
