

Lost Colony Drama Swings Into Its Second Decade

America's longest-lived outdoor drama, Paul Green's internationally famous "The Lost Colony" swung into its second decade in Waterside Theatre at Manteo on Roanoke Island, N. C. with the presentation of the 1951 season premiere, Saturday night, June 30. Colorful scenes from the show which was witnessed by more than 500,000 persons during the first 10 years of its life are shown. In top photo highly trained island girls in role of Devonshire milkmaids are shown dancing for Sir Walter Raleigh. Upwood, the dancing Indian medicine man, (insert at left) played again this season by John Lehman of Raleigh and Chapel Hill is shown in his sensational ceremonial dance to the corn god of the Indians of 16th century Roanoke Island. Part of a full house audience at Waterside Theatre (capacity 3,100) is shown in center picture witnessing the colorful christening scene on the stage in which Virginia Dare, first child of English parentage born in the new world is baptised. Insert at right shows old Tom Harris, played by Warren Lee Terry, New York opera star and Agona his Indian squaw consort adding comedy to the drama which otherwise is deeply religious and a serious drama built up around the greatest mystery of all history — the disappearance of Sir Walter Raleigh's 1587 expedition which attempted settlement on Roanoke Island. Music for the Lost Colony is by the famous Lost Colony chorus made up of voices of Westminster choir members and under the direction of Theos Cronk. They are shown in drama's choir last in bottom picture. Production schedule of the Lost Colony this season calls for performances every night, except Mondays, at 8:15 o'clock through September 2. There has been no increase in admission prices for the season which celebrates beginning of a new decade. (Lost Colony Photos.)

in 24 hours should be repeated as soon as weather permits. In 25 demonstrations conducted in five peanut-producing counties in 1949 and 50, an average increase of 435 pounds of nuts per acre was obtained where fields were treated with copper sulfur dust mixture. An average yield increase of 227 pounds per acre was obtained in fields treated with straight 325-mesh dusting sulfur.

After subtracting cost of dust and assuming an average price of 11 3/4 cents a pound for peanuts, this was an extra profit of $47.86 per acre for fields treated with copper-sulfur and $24.67 per acre for those treated with straight sulfur. In addition, dusting for control of leaf-spot improved both the yield and quality of the hay sufficiently to cover the cost of treatment.
