State College Questions And Answers

QUESTION: How can I control the peach tree borer?
ANSWER: There are two types of borer - the peach tree borer and the lesser peach tree borer. Both can be controlled by applying eight pounds of DDT 50 per cent wettable powder the first of July, August, and September, according to Clyde F. Smith, head of entomology at State College. Use of summer sprays is the only satisfactory means of controlling the lesser borer, says Smith. The regular borer can be controlled by spraying cyfluthrin or parathion in early October. However, summer sprays will result in a much better tree appearance.

Snatched To Safety

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—James Love of Oakland struggles to pull Mois Mayo to safety after he leaped railing of Golden Gate Bridge, in what authorities termed an attempt to leap to her death from the span. Love came to her assistance after he saw her race from her car toward the railing. Cameron John Hurley, also witness to the drama, standing nearby taking a ship picture, shouted to the girl. She turned momentarily, enabling Love to grab her shirt and drag her to safety a picture here. Warsaws of the Goldste can be seen hundreds of feet below.

Circular Published On Forage Disease

Many farmers do not realize it, but forage and legumes and grasses are subject to attack by several diseases just as are other crop plants. For example, in North Carolina at least 12 diseases are known to occur on alfalfa, seven on Ladino clover, six on Lespedeza, five on orchard grass and four on tall fescue.
