In Edison's Home and In Today's Home

THE OLD—This ungainly giant of a washing machine is the seed from which sprang today's streamlined, automatic wonders. The world's first all-electric washer, the Thor-Electric, went on the market in 1907 (this particular machine went into Thomas Alva Edison's home to do the washing for 12 years). While the model shows exasperation at the labor involved in putting the capacity load of "30 shirts or 12 sheets" through a three-roll wringer, introduction of the machine marked a momentous step in emancipating the homemaker from the scrubboard.

THE NEW—Forty-five years of engineering have produced the modern time and labor saver which has reduced the job of doing the family laundry to that, relatively, of an incidental household task. Improvements give the homemaker of today a cleaner wash than her grandmother produced. No longer need she go through the backbreaking routine of lifting heavy wet clothes from wash and rinse waters to put them repeatedly through the wringer. Today's machine does all the washing, rinsing and water extracting at the flick of the handy switch.

Kenneth Dupree are expecting to leave Friday for Winter Haven, Fla. to spend the Christmas holidays. Quite a number from here went to Mt. Olive Friday afternoon for the Christmas parade. The Home Demonstration club met with Miss Sallie Outlaw Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Paul Outlaw and Mrs. M. L. Outlaw joint hostess. There was a good attendance of members and visitors. Lottie Berger presided and called the club to order with "Silent Night" and club collect.

Miss Pauline Outlaw was at her post of duty as secretary and gave the minutes of the November meeting. Other items of business dispersed with Mrs. Elmo Bizzard giving an interesting reading on the value of "Recreation". Miss Rachel Outlaw, music leader, reported on the origin and story of "Silent Night". Miss Pauline Outlaw gave the House Furnishing leaders report, using the deep freezer as a main topic. Mrs. Troy Kornegay, Duplin Home Agent held installation services for the new officers for 1952-53 as follows: Mrs. M. L.

program. The public is cordially invited to attend.
