And undoubtedly, England would have a coal surplus today if miners went

C. W. Harder

It is not difficult to guess the solution being followed.

The Marshall Plan is solving that situation. Not only is America sending 50 million tons of coal to Europe, but American taxpayers are also being assessed transportation costs.

Actually, the burden on taxpayers is at least quadrupled.

Actually, the burden on tax-payers is at least quadrupled.

Coal being shipped to Europe costs $6.00 per ton average at the mine. But by the time that same coal is landed in England, or Europe, the cost has jumped from $24.00 to $25.00 per ton. Now there appears in Washington representatives of big firms who control this nation's coal arm in arm with John Lew Their wants are simple, They merely want the Marshall Plan to raise the shipments of coal to Europe from 30 million tons to 50 million tons. Thus comes into sharp focus, the close working agreements between monopoly industry and

heiween Big Labor and Big Business are as pleny in the Bing Crophy-Reb Hope feud. It's all in the spirit of good clean fun pursuing an old game of misleading the general public.

For a long time, due to petroleum, better usage of fuels, and chaotic strikes, the American coal industry has been on the down grade. Mine owners who form a pretty tight monopoly, want to hold high profits. On the other hand, John Lewis claims greater coal production is needed for his miners.

Yet, that claim does not ring true at a time when production of copper and other metals does not meet the needs due to a shortage of miners, and when copper producing areas are extensively advertising for miners.

Naturally, if coal miners go into other mines and other uni-ons Lewis loses dues and power. It is also a safe presumption that small coal outfits are getting little, if any, of this foreign business.

And naturally, coal mine owners are most happy to work with John on this matter. As long as American taxpayers will pay the cost of giving away coal, and as long as American consumers will pay more for coal, they have everything to gain and nothing

Many Congressmen, now at nome, are becoming educated by the small and independent businessmen. Gradually, this fact is sinking in.

Government wasting of the people's money is a weapon for building monopoly in the nation. Industrial and labor monopolies are using a weak minded government to perpetrate one of the greatest hoaxes in history.
