Rambling in Duplin

was also sorry that he was not at home because I would have enjoyed talking with him too. He was feeling better that morning. Mrs. Newkirk said and decided to go to Rose Hill with some relatives from New York. Mrs. Newkirk told me she was not able to see as good as she once did. She had been out gathering eggs and even though she could not see them she enjoyed seeing and bringing them in.

After I left Mrs. Newkirk's I stopped at C. B. Estelle's home. I had planned to go into Newkirk's Millpond but Mr. Ezell told me I had better not since the road was bad. I surely didn't want to get stuck as I had been in the past. I was riding and noticing the many white patches dotting large areas along the road I realized that the farmers had gotten their tobacco seeds planted and were looking forward to a fine crop this year. You probably do not realize how much work there is to farming unless you go out and see for yourself. There are huge fields that have been plowed and lots of other work has been done towards getting the spring crops underway.

I have heard a lot about "Lake Tut" so I decided I would ride by and see it for myself. It is going to be a beautiful place and should be an outstanding attraction in Duplin County and to many other sections of this area. It is not only to be a summer resort but they plan also to be open all winter. The resort will cover about five acres when completed. There will be swimming, dancing and many other amusements. Mr. Russell was very nice and showed me around the place and explained every detail. The walls are finished with cypress and

Luther H. Hodges Candidate For Lt. Governor

Announcement by Luther H. Hodges, of Leaksville (Rockingham county) as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor brings into the political arena a businessman who is putting into practice some of the advice he has given in public addresses and private conversations. Hodges has long urged that men from business and industry use their experience and capabilities in public life and political affairs.

Hodges worked as an office boy and mill employee at Leaksville, N.C. After college he resumed his work with the Marshall Field mills later becoming general manager. He was vice-president of Marshall Field when he retired from the company in April 1950 and accepted an assignment with the Economic Co-operation Administration. He served for a year as chief of the industry division of the E.C.A. in Germany. Since his return he has devoted himself to several business enterprises of which he is part-owner.

Although it is his first time to offer for an elective office, Hodges served under former Governor O. Max Gardner as a member of the State Board of Vocational Education and under former Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus as a member of the State Highway Commission. He has rendered other public service to the State and nation, including two assignments in Europe for the U. S. Government.

Hodges, 53, has lived at Leaksville since 1900. He received his A.B. degree at the University of North Carolina in 1919 and was awarded an honorary L.L.D. degree there in 1946. He is a former trustee of the University and served as president of the Business Foundation of North Carolina. He is a prominent Rotarian and has represented Rotary in various capacities throughout the world.

24 Negro 4-H Club Adult Leaders For A 4-H Leader Training School

Twenty-four Negro 4-H Club Adult Leaders met here Wednesday night to attend a 4-H Leader Training School. The meeting was opened with a discussion led by Alcease Massenbergh, local home agent, on "What 4-H Work Does?" A county map was then shown pointing out the location and enrollment of 4-H clubs in the county.

The main speaker for the occasion was Mrs. Idell J. Randall, Asst. Negro State 4-H Specialist. Mrs. Randall spoke on the "Leaders role in the 4-H Program."

A brief buzz session was conducted following the address at which time the leaders grouped themselves to form leadership plans for their respective neighborhoods. The efficiency of the leaders was obvious as a result of their constructive thinking during the buzz session. Out of the discussion, the leaders arrived at these points that they were going to adopt in their neighborhoods:

1. Hold joint neighborhood meetings with the 4-H members.
2. Hold joint leader planning meetings.
3. Encourage 4-Hers to increase projects.
4. Encourage parents to support the 4-H activities of their children.
5. Obtain up to date scientific information from the county agents to pass on to the 4-Hers.
6. To educate parents and others as to the value of 4-H work and projects.
7. To create and stimulate more interest in project work.
8. To encourage club members to practice thrift.
9. To pass of the talents that they as leaders have, and to learn from each other how to do things.
10. To follow through on project activity.

The interest and determination of the leaders to do a good job was nicely expressed by Mrs. Middleton of Kenansville who stated, "I wouldn't give up being a 4-H leader for anything."

SPORTS AFIELD

I have at last discovered a true "sportsman's" yacht. It's the ideal answer for salt-water duck shooting; if there's no sign of ducks, you can try fishing; if the fishing is lousy too, you go sailing. This dream craft is an old 44-foot auxiliary motorboat belonging to Robert Uhl, He writes about her lovingly:

My yawl doesn't look like a Bermuda Race winner. She'll never have her picture on the cover of Yachting. But she's mine and I love her. I discovered her by pure accident in a small boatyard on Long Island. Her name was Prima Donna and she was a mighty disheveled lady with her mizzen shrouds starboard bowsprit guy and life lines broken and dangling, and canvas peeling from her decks.

She's broad and squat and stubborn-masted and only the good Lord knows how old she is. But her bottom is as solid and sound as a Labrador's heart. When I stepped on her deck, I knew that I had to have her.

Prima Donna has two real beds (not bunks) in her main cabin. A huge icebox for a boat, a big galley, and a good "head." The forward cabin sleeps three in oversized berths. She has a big coal-burning stove that's a joy to cook on, and that keeps the cabin warm on the coldest days. For hot weather, there's a good alcohol stove. Her cockpit is big and uncluttered, her decks broad and clear. Eighty horsepower pushes her at a rousing eight knots under power. She's quiet and dry with an easy action in any kind of sea.

That's my sailing-fishing-hunting yawl. Thanks to her, I can sneer at fellow hunters, fishermen and yachtsmen alike. At hunters who must rise at 2 a. m. and go through purgatory before they start shooting; at spring and fall fishermen who must do likewise, and at summertime yachtsmen who must endure my brags about off-season adventures while their own craft are "shore in a shipyard. This is unquestionably one of the greatest pleasures of life—to be able to feel so superior.

2, 4-D Will Control Weeds In Corn

Cocklebur, morning glory, and other troublesome weeds in corn can be controlled with chemicals, says Glenn C. Klingman, weed control scientist with the North Carolina Experiment Station.

Chemical weed control, says Klingman, is both easy and economical. For example, the cost of treating corn with 2, 4-D is less than $1 per acre.

"The 2, 4-D material," he adds, "will control both cocklebur and morning glory and, if properly used, it won't damage the corn."

Klingman explains that when weeds are removed chemically, all the available moisture, soil nutriests, and light are made available to the corn. In many cases the extra yield of corn on fields treated with 2,4-D is worth more than 10 times the cost of the treatment.

"There's no point in buying good seed corn, providing abundant soil fertility, and doing all the necessary work to grow good corn—only to have weeds take over the field and reduce your yield," says the Experiment Station scientist.

For more complete information on the use of 2, 4-D in corn, see your county agent or write Klingman in care of the North Carolina Experiment Station, Raleigh, and ask for mimeographed sheet on "Chemical Weed Control in corn."
