Farmers Day In Warsaw Saturday

How to Do It—

Power Tools Deserve Good Care

Power tool cords can easily be protected. When a cord must be laid in the path of traffic lay two planks close together and run the cord between them. Avoid kinks and don't lay cords over sharp-edged materials. Don't carry a tool by its cord.

In using an electric hand-saw, let the saw itself do the work. It's a mistake to try to rush a job. Don't press down on the top of the saw and don't crowd the saw by pushing it. A jammed saw overloads the motor, and motor repairs are expensive.

GARDEN TIME

ROBERT SCHMIDT

N. C. STATE COLLEGE

The sweet potato is a relatively easy crop to grow but at the same time we can grow a better and higher quality crop with just a little extra attention to details.

In the first place, get good plants—certified plants if possible. With all the serious diseases that attack the sweet potato you are taking a big chance of bringing them into your garden or fields by means of infected plants. Black rot, wilt, and scurf will live over in the soil for several years after they are brought in and internal cork is becoming a serious problem to sweet potato growers.

The best time to plant, I believe, is June 1 to 15, unless you intend to take vine cuttings, in which case earlier planting would be in order. The most satisfactory variety for our conditions is the Louisiana strain of Porto Rico. Other new introductions are being tried out and may prove desirable.

The best soil is a fine sandy loam that does not pack. The fertilizer recommendation is 1000 pounds per acre of a 3-9-9 mixture applied in the ridge about a week before setting the plants. Manure should not be used for sweet potatoes and too much nitrogen will make a poor quality potato. A ridge about 12 inches high is usually best and the plants should be set 12 inches apart in the row.

These practices have been found best for the Porto Rico potato, and at the present time that variety is most popular. It is a good producer and a good keeper in storage.
