Shingles Unhurt as Roof Blows Off

These interlocking asphalt shingles were properly applied. Although the wind was powerful enough to blow the complete roof deck off the building, the roofing material stayed in place undamaged.

Good Construction Defeats Wind, Say Insurance Men

In Nebraska, where nature has a habit of staging some of her fiercest storms, insurance companies are campaigning to make farm buildings more resistant to wind. This invisible force smashes walls, blows away entire roof assemblies and moves whole buildings off their foundations—but insurance companies say damage would be negligible if farm structures were properly built.

"When complete buildings or large sections of buildings are damaged is when insurance companies suffer heavy losses," says Henry J. Requarte, past chairman of the Windstorm Conference committee of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Companies. "Lesser damage, such as damage to roofing material, is relatively unimportant."

"Wind easily searches out the weak points in construction. If a few nails are incorrectly spaced, a joint can be pulled apart and this can lead to wrecking of the whole structure. If roof rafters are not securely anchored to the walls, a roof deck can blow off even though the roofing material itself stays in place."

Mr. Requarte, who is president of the Farmers Mutual Insurance Company of Nebraska, says special construction methods have been developed to make barns and other farm buildings highly wind-resistant.

"Building materials themselves are not the problem," he emphasizes. "The materials will do their job if they are properly applied. In cases where a manufacturer furnishes instruction sheets, the instructions should be followed exactly."

To anchor a roof to the walls, ties between rafters and studs should be supplied. Where a ridge board is used, collar beams should hold rafters on one side of the roof to those on the other. Diagonal corner braces for walls are essential for wind protection.

Dress Revue

girls. A Dan River green plaid took the spotlight as a gay summer favorite modeled by Gerry Teachey of Rose Hill. She made a perky little hat to wear with it. Mary Vann Wilkins of Rose Hill won second place for the dress she made and modeled. This dress can be changed by different colored petticoats and can be worn to church, parties, or semi-formal affairs.

Next came the Senior 4-H girls. Doris Bostic modeled a stunning little orchid organdy dress which can be worn to parties and other occasions when she wants to look especially dressed up. Lulda Parker of Kenansville looked as cool as a snowflake and twice as crisp in her frankly provocative dotted swiss and organdy dress. It had scallopes and a saucy sash. She won second place for the dress she made and modeled. This dress can be changed by different colored petticoats and can be worn to church, parties, or semi-formal affairs.

The judges for the dress revues were Miss Mary Em. Lee, Extension Clothing Specialist of Raleigh; Mrs. Clayton Herring (Nettie Grace Cameron) of Rose Hill, former assistant agent in Duplin County and Miss Cornelia Quinn, Beulaville Home Ec. Teacher.

Miss Marjorie Jones of Kenansville and 4-H Club member designed the covers for the programs.

Following is a list of the prize contributors. A large table lamp which was used as grand prize was given by Warsaw Furniture Co., cake pan, Farmer's Hardware; picnic basket, Clark Drug Co.; candy dish, Warsaw Floral Co.; certificate for pair of hose, D. B. Best; hand lotion, Mack Beauty Shop; bath powder, Warsaw Drug Co., Aluminum foil, Pages Appliance Co., of Warsaw; ten passes to movies, Duplin Theatre in Warsaw. The 4-H prizes were: A certificate for 4 yards of material from Kramer's Dept. Store in Wallace; certificate for 4 yards of material, C. E. Quinn Co., of Kenansville; and bath powder from Kenansville Drug Store.

Raleigh, May 28, 1952

Dear Mr. Cushman:

You did a splendid job with the Carbine Williams story.

Since a spot account of an event several days old in a weekly falls flat on its face, you avoided this by giving your piece a personal touch that made good reading.

Some of the best writing in newspapering today goes from the county weekly newspaper office into the rural mail boxes—and I think you're doing your share of good writing. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
Jim Whitfield, State Editor, News and Observer.

Mrs. Helen Caldwell Cushman
The Duplin Times

Dear Helen:

Thank you for letting me read the Duplin Times. I liked the forthright and courageous point of view of the editorials, and I especially like the way you handle the news giving it a warm and human touch to keep it fresh and entertaining. It sounds like a real grass roots American paper—and we need lots more of them.

You are doing a good job with your column—one columnist to another—it's amusing and objective and has the proper homey informal
