What Are We Going To Do About It?

By J. R. Grady
Opportunity is knocking. A New Duplin is in the offing if we will take advantage of it. These opportunities are not wishful thinking or dreams. They are realities. We have accused ourselves in the past of wanting something for our county and communities but not getting anything because we expected a fairy to come along and drop an industry down into our lap. That is almost what is about to happen to Warsaw and possibly Kenansville, Magnolia and Beulaville. But it isn't quite all that easy. We are not being asked to purchase stock in a new business or to guarantee anything but adequate housing facilities and adequate labor. As I said last week my hat is off to Aubrey Cavanaugh of Warsaw. Governor Scott named him to the Department of Conservation and Development. Some of us at first felt Aubrey could and would drop a new industry into Duplin by magic but it didn't and couldn't happen that way. Aubrey has begged and pleaded with leaders in the various communities to prepare themselves and go out after something, promising the full cooperation of his department. It seems we have not done our part at home. The folks in Wallace got busy and secured a textile plant and maybe that has pointed the way for Warsaw. Last week we announced a new dress factory coming to Warsaw. This didn't just happen. Aubrey Cavanaugh pointed the way and the Warsaw business men, lead by John Jenkins and Aubrey and a few others grabbed at the opportunity and made the dream come true.

This week Mayor G. S. Best of Warsaw called the Times and asked us to urge the white women of Duplin (white women are the only ones eligible for this particular plant) to take advantage of the opportunity and make application for work in this factory. Mr. Best, in his usual foresightedness, pointed that the Top Mode Manufacturing Company of Pennsylvania, that is moving one of its plants to Warsaw, will become interested in moving their entire operations to Warsaw or some other Duplin town if adequate labor can be secured. If this instance can reveal, by applications, sufficient labor available there is a chance that Top Mode will move all their operations to Duplin and others will follow suit if we can show them by actual record that sufficient labor is available. We are informed via the grape vine that one of the nation's top manufacturers of hats and one of the largest woolen industries in the nation have their eyes on Duplin. They want to know how much labor is available first. Read the ad of Top Mode and the ad of Quinn-McGowan and Warsaw Furniture Company in this issue ladies and be sure and apply for a job. If you apply it doesn't mean you have to accept the job if conditions are not favorable at the time. We want as many applications as possible so that we can show Top Mode and the other interested industries that Duplin County is the place for them to locate. Duplin already has awakened, let's get on the move. This is the time every available potential laborer can do her part to build a bigger and greater Duplin. Maybe the wage price listed doesn't exactly suit you. If not those matters may be straightened out later. Let it be known you are available—Now!

Activation of a second 100,000-horsepower unit on June 20 made this Goldsboro plant the largest generating station in the Carolina Power and Light Company system. Of latest design, the new unit will produce a kilowatt hour of power from every 7-10 pound of coal consumed. The 123-foot boiler for the new unit is the square steel structure directly in front of the smoke stack, which is 200 feet tall. At lower left is Neuse River. (Aerial photo by Wyman Viall.)

Mammoth New CP & L Street Unit Will Boost Power In Duplin County

By Helen Caldwell Cushman
Power—tremendous, almost unbelievable power—was unleashed last Friday at the new steam electric generating station of the CP&L at Goldsboro. The company put into operation its second 100,000-horsepower unit at Quaker Neck on the Neuse river, giving the Goldsboro plant a capacity of one billion kilowatt hours a year. This amount is about equal to the amount from the new government hydro-plant at Buggs Island which cost $9 mills to produce. The Goldsboro plant cost approximately $20,000,000 to build, while the Buggs Island project will cost the government, and the U. S. Taxpayer nearly $100,000,000. Furthermore, the yearly capacity of the steam plant at Quaker Neck will be one billion kilowatt hours, while the maximum that can be expected from Buggs Island in an average year will be about 410,000. In a dry year, this wattage will drop to about 200,000 kilowatt hours. All the power capacity of these new CP&L plants will not be immediately utilized but will be available for industries which will develop now that the power is here. The plant itself is huge, colossal, almost frightening. It is a bewildering maze of catwalks, pipes, boilers, pulverizers, pumps, condensers, generators. In places the heat from the uninsulated pipes was overpowering, and the contrast in the air conditioned control room was a sharp and keenly felt one. Even the figures that the guides and the engineers used were astronomical, impossible to visualize in every day terms. It was a pleasure to have them translated into figures that made some sense to me by Louis Sutton who pointed out the highlights of the structure. From him, I learned simple facts that were comprehensible — that three-fourths of a kilowatt equals one horsepower, and that in an efficient steam plant like the one at Quaker Neck, 10,000 BTUs will

Paris Green Fatal To Duplin Farmer

Alfred Deaver, 57-year-old farmer, died at his home near the Friendship church last Thursday from the effects of Paris Green. The suicide was investigated by the Sheriff's Department. He had previously threatened to take his life with a shot gun, and his wife is said to have carried it to a neighbor's house to prevent his using it. On the morning of his death, he had been hoeing corn with some members of his family. He stuck the hoe in the ground and remarked that he had hoed the last row of corn he had ever intended to hoe. As he passed his daughter he told her good-bye. When the family came to the house, they found him dying, and tried to get a doctor. On the table beside him was a glass in which water had been mixed with Paris Green, a highly poisonous insecticide. Services were held at the graveside of the Deaver family cemetery Sunday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. William D. Tyndall of Mount Olive.

Rones Chapel Section Due To Get Telephone Service At Once

Rones Chapel will have telephone service "almost immediately" if they want them. According to J. W. Campbell, manager of the Goldsboro office of Southern Bell Telephone Company, the lines will be run into the area off the Mt. Olive line if the residents will clear the right-of-way. The unveiling of "telephones for Rones Chapel" was at the last meeting of the Rones Chapel Church. According to Aldine White, field president of the club, the construction and completion of the Mt. Olive telephone system, which will begin in the near future if plans are carried out. Campbell told the group a crew will canvass the area soon to determine how many residents want telephone service. At the same time, the crew will stake the paths for the right-of-way. The manager said facilities in the Mt. Olive system will allow for only about 200 new subscribers. This means a certain number of lines will have to be cut. The new lines will be served by the new lines which are being built between Kenansville and Calypso highway and Highway 41, toward Kenansville.

Reward Increased In Baysden Murder

W. E. Baysden, theatre owner and real-estate dealer from Richlands, has offered an additional reward of $300 to be added to the $700 reward already offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the slaying of his wife on May 18. Mrs. Baysden's body was found in the seat of her late model car in a parking lot at Carolina Beach. The coroner of New Hanover County, Fred Coleman, said at the time the body was discovered that he was of the opinion that the woman had been killed elsewhere and her body transported to the beach. Doctors at the Duke University Hospital performed an autopsy on the body. The report of the autopsy has never been made public because the authorities said to release it would hinder the investigation. Several suspects have been questioned without result. Earlier the three surviving brothers of the dead woman had offered a reward of $700 for information leading to the arrest of the guilty party.
