From Singing Of The Heart—Bess Hinson Hines

One of my good friends in Kenansville who is now at her home in Highlands has graciously given me permission to quote from her daughter's book of poetry—and I am using four of my favorites. (I wonder if the Kenansville people miss Miss Bess Hines as much as I do—she always has a smile and is filled with life and a zest for life with imagination and a marvelous sense of humor. Hurry back, Miss Bess, some of our joy here leaves us when you go. H.C.C.)

OLD SOUTHERN TOWN
In Kenansville, in Kenansville,
Everything is old
The Autumn sunlight even
A mellow antique gold.

The sidewalks, long and shady,
Remember other days
When other footfalls trod
Their sweet familiar ways.

The houses, cool, colonial,
Sit back among the trees—
About their fading shutters fall
The dying Autumn leaves.

In Kenansville, in Kenansville,
In the lingering days of fall
I listen to my elders talk
I hear their memories call.

This is one of Bess Hinson Hines—that is our 'Miss Bess' daughter, is one I have loved since I first read it—especially the last two lines.

DEFINITION

Poems are the white moths born Out of the smoky mist of dreams. Poems are the Eagles torn From the wind. And a light that streams

From the door of Heaven, left ajar By the gods as they entered space. A Poem is a look that once I found upon your face.

PROCRUSTINATION

Drink the red, red wine of life When the offer's made— If you wait until tomorrow It may be lemonade!

WEALTH

I am a millionaire—I own The starry skies, from pole to pole Countless gleaming coins In the treasury of my soul.

An average loan rate of 50.8 cents per pound for 1952 crop flue-cured tobacco and a schedule of rates by grades have been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.
