Combination Heater-Light Warms Small Home Areas

OF the new electrical appliances that make life easier and, as a result more fun, there is one utility fixture that gives a maximum return for the money spent. And to the family fighting the battle of the budget, this is indeed welcome news.

A new combination all-electric ceiling heater, overhead light and air circulator is designed to eliminate the hazards of the ordinary wall or portable auxiliary heater. It's installed in the ceiling for the utmost in service.

This places it, of course, beyond the reach of children's hands and eliminates the chance of burns or shocks suffered from backing into an ordinary heater.

A fan draws the air from the ceiling, pulls it through the unit and thus heats it and forces it down into the room where it is circulated for uniform comfort from floor to ceiling. Thus, it's ideal for bathrooms, bedrooms, nurseries, recreation rooms or other small areas requiring heat, light and air circulation.

Besides all its other advantages this utility appliance fits into the decor of a room, unobtrusively lending beauty to it.

Are You Up-To-Date Not If You Believe In Hot Weather Bunk

If you have been feeling the heat, and who has not you should re-examine some of the old wives' tales about how to exist in this torrid, horrible weather we have been having so much of that it is no longer news when the temperature rises above 100—day after day, week after week—and soon in its third month. Exist is used advisedly, too. It is something of a feat to be able to work in such weather at all. Amy Selwyn, writing in This Week shows that many of our notions about how to act in a heat wave are unscientific and may make us even hotter, heaven forbid.

She advises that we make a list of all the favorite nostrums for keeping cool, and then tear it up. Most of the well-known recommendations won't keep you cool. Some of them may make us even hotter. Should you eat lightly? Doctors say that your need for nourishment is determined not by the weather but by the amount of energy you expend. If your work and your activities are about the same in summer and winter, you will need the same amount of food.

Should you eat cool foods? Dr. Bogert, professor of food economics at Kansas State College, points out that the amount of heat released by food depends upon the calories, not its temperature. A plaster of cold chicken will warm you more than a steaming cup of chicken soup because it has more calories.

Must you avoid pork? There's no danger in eating pork if it's properly cooked.

Do iced drinks make you cool? No, they do not—iced drinks interfere with the body's normal temperature—regulating mechanism.

Can men take hot weather better than women? No, they can't—women have a six degree comfort range, whereas men have only two. Ill people take heat harder than healthier ones, and elderly people and children under eight can't take much heat either.

Will you keep cooler if you stay quiet and avoid exercise? The U. S. Army says no—not if you are a normally healthy person. The more inactive you are the more you may be affected by the heat. Should you let an electric fan blow directly on you? There is conclusive evidence to show that it's perfectly healthful. For best results, keep the fan close to the floor.

Is air conditioning dangerous? Not at all—doctors say that during an oppressive heat spell you would be wise to park yourself periodically in an air-conditioned building. When too much heat builds up inside a person, he's subject to heat stroke.

Will cold showers keep you cool? Well, a lukewarm one will leave you much cooler. But much simpler for relief is just soaking your hand and forearm in cool-not cold water.

Look Up: You May See Flying Saucers

Even the air force that so disdainfully laughed at the idea now admits that there is something to the flying saucer story. They not only admit it, but they have sent up jet fighters to intercept them. This time, the reports were substantiated—the objects appeared on the radar screen in Washington. But they have not yet overtaken any, nor have they bothered to clear up the mystery.

Meanwhile they have been seen in Wilmington, in Raleigh, and in Goldsboro and in Burgaw. The ones in Goldsboro were seen by four witnesses. Mr. W. D. Griffin said that the saucer came out of the north-northwest and took less than two minutes to cross the horizon. Those in Raleigh came from the South and traveled North. All those who have seen them say they are brightly lighted—but lights alone could not be picked up on a radar screen—something with substance must be involved.
