WHEN TO APOLOGIZE

After leaving the home of a woman on whom we had made a call, my companion made a remark that might have sounded harsh. Mrs. Read apologized for everything—except for living. I wonder how she happened to overlook that she added. This blunt comment was absolutely true. Mrs. Read was one of those uninteresting creatures an—apologizer. She apologized for the appear-

Rotarians Plan Home-Coming Day

The Warsaw Rotary Club met last Thursday at the school cafeteria. The president, Mr. Lee Brown presided. Plans were made to observe Home Coming Day in the near future and many out of town members are expected to attend.

There are a good many persons like Mrs. Read—apologizers, who make life uncomfortable for those who have to listen to them and who make themselves unhappy in the process.

The wisest men and women know that there is only one time when so-

Mrs. Rosa Powell Honored At Tea

The home of the Powell sisters of Warsaw was the lovely setting for a tea given on the afternoon of the 21st honoring Mrs. Rosa Powell, Miss Mary Hester Powell and the teachers of the Warsaw schools.

Mrs. J. P. Harmon and Mrs. L. S. Whittle welcomed the guests at the front entrance. In the receiving line were Mrs. Kathleen Snyder who introduced the guests to the honored guests. Others in the line were Mrs. Clarence Warren, Miss Jean Newkirk, Mrs. M. A. Smith, Mrs. Marshall, Miss Mary Hester Powell, Mrs. Rosa Powell, Mrs. Edna McLamb, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Edwin Ewers, Mrs. Daulton West.

Presiding over the guests book of apologies are in order. They recognize that time, apologize when it comes, and then simply refuse to indulge in the weak practice of apologizing at other times.

When is it right to apologize? Whenever you are guilty of some form of rudeness. Please do so at this time and there draw the line. Refuse to apologize for your appearance or your inability to entertain more lavishly. You over worked mothers, if you get caught out with your house in a muss even if you can only claim a path to travel in (be thankful for the path,) and don't apologize. After all it will only call more attention to your poor house keeping and be more embarrassing for all concerned.

If you will follow this rule you will certainly make fewer people uncomfortable in your presence, and hence will be better liked by everyone. For after all apologies are simply an indication of weakness and do no one any good.

IS THERE A MARTYR IN YOUR HOUSE

Have you a martyr in your home? Am full of the subject because one of them has been sitting on my back step all morning telling me her troubles. For example:

She spent three hours cooking up a special dinner for Amos last night and old Amos forgot to come home or probably went out carousing with his gang.

She almost worked her eyes out embroidering a blouse for Tillie and now Tillie has decided to wear only tailored ones.

She waited all last week for someone to invite her to go to the movies and "narry a person" peeped.

She gave up her vacation so that Bill could get a new bicycle and Ted could go to the mountains. And they both ungratefully took it as a matter of course.

She was just one big ache of bitter resentment and my, she wanted sympathy. I tried to give it to her, but I felt like a hypocrite for I didn't really feel sympathy. If the truth was known I think most of her misery is her own fault and that applies just as surely to most of us as well.

If she wants to go to the movies, why in the blues doesn't she go, instead of nursing a secret sorrow? If they don't appreciate her toil and sacrifice? Why not let Miss Tillie buy her blouses ready made in the first place and why not let old Amos eat out of a can? She'd be one of the gang then and a lot more likely to earn their respect.

If she'd relax her standards a bit and smile occasionally her family would appreciate her. They'd share their interests with her and come to her with their confidences. But just as long as she sits around fitting an imaginary halo on her head, she is sure to find a great many things in life to complain about.
