Prospect For Bees And Honey At State Fair Next Week Best Ever Say Officials

Raleigh — Prospects are the best we have ever had for an outstanding display of bees and honey at the State Fair, Frank D. Meacham of the N. C. Department of Agriculture said today in announcing plans for the department which he will direct at the 1932 exposition here from Tuesday, October 14, through Saturday of next week. He said the honey harvest of Tar Heel beekeepers was good this year.

"We have more space assigned for the Bees and Honey Department at the Fair," Meacham declared, "and our exhibit of bees, honey, beeswax, and delicious foods made with honey as the principal sweetening agent should set a high standard for quality, eye appeal and educational value."

Serving with Meacham as associate directors are William A. Stephen, Extension bookkeeping specialist at State College, and James F. Greene, Jr., entomologist of the N. C. Department of Agriculture. The judges announced today by the directors are: Z. L. Lloyd, Ben Williams and Mrs. H. W. Taylor.

A most interesting feature this year, said Meacham, will be a sample of sweet clover honey produced in 1932. This will demonstrate what honey will look like after aging 32 years. The sample resembles a honey mass, dark brown and almost black in color, with a taste akin to old blackstrap molasses containing a touch of asphalt. However, the odor is very pleasant, not unlike that of dark type honey.

Meacham said that entries for the Bees and Honey Show at the Fair will close Saturday, October 11, at 9:00 p. m., and exhibits must be in place by 9:00 p. m. on Monday, October 13. Judging will start at 9:00 a. m. on Tuesday, October 14, the opening day of the Fair. Duplin County bees are expected to be entered by Colon Holland of Kenansville and probably others from Duplin.

Attendance prize was won by Mr. Charlie Thomas's 8th grade room. Grade mothers were chosen for the year at this meeting. They are as follows: Mrs. Anna Johnson's 1st grade, Mrs. Melvin Pope and Mrs. V. D. Wilson. Miss Betty Horne's room, Mrs. Clifton Chestnut and Mrs. Shelton Batla. Mrs. Agnes B. Barden's room, Mrs. Galtha Drew and Mrs. Thurman Evans. Mrs. Paul Tucker's room, Mrs. David Rouse and Mrs. Emmet Sasser. Mrs. Ethel Tucker's room, Mrs. Harold Ezzell and Mrs. Hubert Tucker. Mrs. Charles Thomas room, Mrs. A. M. Usher and Mrs. Fred Johnson.

It was voted on at this meeting that the time be changed from 8 o'clock to 7:30 o'clock beginning with the November meeting. Following the business session of
