Match-Scent Sets; Perfume Harmony

Fragrant Toiletries Must Blend

BY EDNA MILES

WOMEN who use a solid cologne stick in one scent and a cologne deodorant in another frequently find that the fragrances clash and thus cancel out each other.

Actually, a woman does herself more harm than good if she wears several scents at the same time. Not only are they confusing, they are far from subtle or delicate in their appeal.

It's always best, then, to buy toilet water, cologne, perfume and solid cologne in one matched set so that you can carry through on one fragrance. Change your perfume with the occasion, day, or mood but never let the fragrances war with each other.

LIGHT, AIRY SCENTS ARE BEST

In a cologne deodorant and solid stick, it's best to pick a light, airy, fresh scent that's flowerlike in its appeal. Save the musky, exotic, sophisticated perfumes for the brisk winter days that are coming.

You'll find that the new cologne deodorant comes packaged in a spill-proof, leak-proof plastic bottle and that it's teamed with a solid stick cologne that's foil-wrapped in a plastic case. This stick is small enough to fit into the corner of your overnight case or handbag but the supply is sufficiently large to last you for weeks.

Chilly Weather Advances Color

ASHEVILLE, N. C. — Early frost at high altitudes is advancing the autumn color season in the mountains of Western North Carolina. The general peak is now expected by October 12, with color holding good until November unless unseasonable rains or temperatures change the outlook. Along the Blue Ridge the mountains in their red and flame colored foliage are being viewed to advantage from high elevations at Grandfather Mountain, near Blowing Rock, and Mt. Mitchell and Craggy Pinnacle, east of Asheville. West of Asheville, color generally is a bit later in the Great Smokies, and National Park naturalists predict the peak there around Oct. 15, with a good display lasting until November, with excellent views from US 19, Soco Gap, Heintzogs, and Clingman's Dome. Good views are to be held between Waynesville and Brevard on US 274 which traverses Pisgah National Forest via Wagon Gap. The Forest Service road to the crest of Pisgah has been improved, and is being used by autumn sightseers. Whiteside Mountain, in the waterfal country along US 64 and Cullasaja Gorge, is popular with autumn sightseers, and color is also coming up fast in Hickory Nut Gorge and around Lake Lure, views from Chimney Rock on US 74. Accommodations are open throughout Western North Carolina, many at reduced rates, and the winter barriers on mlie high roads do not go up until late November unless cold weather causes ice formations.
