DONE-IN DRAGON—Gulping a spear tossed down his throat by a "knight of goodwill," this artificial dragon dies his annual death in the Fourth Arm Wald pageant held every year in the German village. The custom of re-enacting killing original town dragons is continued to fulfill a church pledge made in 1446 to have "a knight of goodwill kill a dragon" every year of the town's existence.

DREAMS OF YOUTH
 I went to a high school program just to pass an hour or so, but it still has left me dreaming things I dreamed of long ago. I thought I had forgotten them, and I thought those dreams were dead, but that program has revived them. Now they're floating through my head.
 I'll graduate from school tonight. 'Tis April of '32
 And I am planning eagerly All the things that I will do. I'll go to college pretty soon. I will study law, I guess
 For if one likes his subject, There's more chances for success. 'Course I'll have a girl in college The prettiest ever seen.
 And she will like me best of all, Though she's the campus queen. And I'm gonna be an athlete And be on the college teams. I'll be the envy of them all 'Tho' its only in my dreams.
 It's funny how those dreams come back, Those dreams that I thought were dead, But suddenly they come to life And are humming through my head.
 And so I'll dream them o'er again, Then I'll tuck them all away, And keep them safe within my heart 'Till I dream some other day.

Carlyle Raynor
