Sam Byrd Reveals Marriage To Ward

(From The Charleston, S. C. "Courier")

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF.

LONDON, Dec 10.—Actor Sam Byrd of Charleston, S. C., revealed here today that for a year and a half he has been married to the British girl who was hurled at his feet in story book circumstances by an explosion on the invasion beaches of Southern England in 1944.

She was Patricia Ann Bolam, who was 10 then.

Sam, who achieved distinction in the plays "Tobacco Road" and "Of Mice and Men" was a lieutenant in the United States Navy.

Patricia was out to watch the excitement when American forces were practicing getting into boats and storming shores near Plymouth. A terrific bang frightened Patricia. The concussion knocked her from the low cliff where she was perched, and Byrd, who was beachmaster, was startled by the child's falling at his feet.

"There she was, crumpled up at the bottom of the cliff," said Byrd today. "I thought this wasn't a real invasion anyway, so I stopped the whole show to give her medical aid. I took her and her little brother, Anthony, to her mother's home and became an intimate friend of the family."

Patricia had just a sprained wrist. But press photographers were on hand and she became known fleetingly as "Pat, the girl who stopped an invasion."

For Byrd, it was just the beginning of his interest. He finished the war in the Pacific and became Pat's unofficial guardian. He took her to America where he saw to her education and then fell in love with her.

As for Pat, Byrd had become her glamorous "Uncle Sam." So in May, 1951, they were married in secrecy at the registry office at Carlisle, Cumberland, England.

"But, what the heck, one can't keep a thing like this secret forever," Sam said today. "She was my ward and is my wife."

"And isn't it grand," said Patricia, who has just arrived for a second visit to her native land since her "Uncle Sam" took her to the United States in 1947. She is 18. He is 44. They declare the world would be just perfect if Byrd's project of producing a play here is successful. He is to play a leading role here in "Stalag 17."

"It may be announced that the little ceremony up in Carlisle was my first and last marriage," Sam said. "A year and a half. We're veterans."

"Pat's mother had a sort of premonition of death," he related, "and she asked me once to promise to take care of Pat and Tony if she should die. I promised. I thought nothing more about it, and went on to the Pacific Theater to finish the war at Okinawa."

MISS SARAH H. TURLINGTON
Home Economist
Appointed By CP&L
To Kinston District

HOMEMAKERS in the Kinston vicinity will soon enjoy the service of a new Carolina Power & Light Company home economist, Miss Sarah H. Turlington, a native of Clinton, will take up headquarters on Monday, December 22, at the Kinston district office and from there will serve Jacksonville, Warsaw, Grifton, Beaufort, Kenansville, Calypso, Faison, Turkey, Richlands and Maysville.

Her appointment was announced this week by Mrs. Marguerite Surles, home service director for the company.

Miss Turlington will assist CP&L customers in the economical use of appliances and will be available for group demonstrations by electrical appliance dealers and other agencies.

A 1950 graduate of Woman's College in home economics, Miss Turlington has been in training with CP&L since November 1 during which time she has studied the whys and wherefores of all the subjects relating to her new work. Prior to her employment by the company, she was a home service representative with the Appalachian Power Company in Princeton, West Virginia.

State Committee Rural Progress Holds Discussion

The State Committee on the Rural Progress Campaign held a lengthy discussion on the accomplishments made in 1952 among Negro citizens.

Duplin had previous been listed among the top five counties in the state as having shown the most progress in agriculture, schools, and churches. Through visitsations of the top five counties this committee composed of heads on the various state departments was making a tedious effort to name a state winner. To be named first place winner Duplin will have to surpass the efforts of Hertford, Edgecombe, Orange and Rockingham.
