Protection From Lockjaw And Its Importance To The Rural Family

by A County Physician

Everyone fortunate enough to live in rural communities knows the pleasures of living near nature and enjoys her many bounties. Rural living is the envy of most city dwellers who often express - "Oh, to live in the country where every one seems so happy and healthy."

In Duplin County it can be said we have about all that could be asked of Nature. We have rich farmland, beautiful scenery, historical towns with legendary families, the headwater of beautiful streams and many other attractions too numerous to mention. Along with this fruitful way of living lurks danger seemingly not realized by many of the rural families. The danger being the disease Tetanus, commonly called lockjaw.

What is lockjaw? Lockjaw or Tetanus is an infectious disease caused by the Tetanus Bacillus. This Tetanus Bacillus is deadly to the susceptible human being if it gains foothold within our tissues. It kills by liberating a toxin as it thrives in the body. The effects of this toxin are fever, severe muscle spasms and eventually death if untreated.

How is the disease transmitted or "picked up?" This Tetanus Bacillus is what is called a spore forming organism. The spores are in the soil awaiting the opportunity to be picked up by an animal tract. They can survive extremes of cold and heat before being killed. So in our country way of life we are constantly walking on possible death. As is well known open wounds should be cleaned and most every one does clean them, but when a puncture wound, as that of stepping on a nail, its difficult if not impossible to kill all the germs implanted in the wound. Here is where lockjaw or the disease Tetanus may make its entrance. The spores are buried in the warm tissues of let us say the foot. Even if the surface is thoroughly cleaned and antiseptic solutions applied, the spores are safely planted for future growth. In a matter of hours the little spore becomes a bacteria and begins to multiply. As these bacteria grow they liberate a waste which is deadly to the human tract; hence is called a toxin. Then unless treated the disease begins slowly to take on its characteristic signs and symptoms.

How can we protect ourselves and our families against lockjaw? First is prevention by safety. There should never be nails to step on. People on farms should realize the danger and work safely to prevent seemingly minor wounds. Secondly, if one should get a wound with possible contamination with the Tetanus Bacillus, the wound should be thoroughly cleaned with lots of recently killed an ordinance which would have permitted any person to destroy a dog which was running at large and found damaging plants or other property. Through the action of the National Dog Welfare Guild, Inc. thousands of dog lovers were notified of this legislation which would have allowed the promiscuous breeding of dogs. It was the letters and telegrams of protest which came from these understanding persons that resulted in the quick death of this shocking ordinance.

This is only one of several items in which the Guild, a non-profit organization sponsoring National Dog Week, has succeeded in correcting antiquated dog laws and incorporating fair laws where they are non-existent. At a meeting of the Guild's Board of Directors, recently held in Chicago, it was decided that an even greater concentration would be placed on the study of dog legislation during the year 1937. This will involve the investigation of further changes in dog legislation throughout the country, removing out-moded laws from the Statutes and introducing new laws which will be advantageous to both dogs and their owners.

In the Sioux City incident, the Guild made several constructive suggestions as to what might be done to curb roaming dogs. Some of these suggestions included an educational program for dog owners which would make them aware of their responsibility as owners; an ordinance which would require dogs to be leashed when on the streets; a provision for adequate facilities to license dogs.

soap and water and antiseptic if available and then report immediately to the family doctor for help. The doctor can administer Tetanus Anti-toxin, which will neutralize or "Kill Off" the toxin from the Tetanus Bacillus, should they be present. But the anti-toxin only protects for a short period of time and in many instances is dangerous to give. Thirdly and most important is immunization. The world has seen great decreases in the death rate due to lockjaw since Tetanus anti-toxin and Tetanus Toxoid were discovered. The protection by active immunization lasts many months and according to some medical authorities up to five years. Then it is so easy to get complete protection by taking three shots but not so easy to die from lockjaw. A booster case every one to two years and at the time of a suspicious wound assures complete protection, simple isn't it? Yet so many go unprotected, risking their lives needlessly. Your family doctor or local health department will gladly at a low cost or for nothing if unable to pay give this protection by immunization.

Only recently a nearby neighbor had or has Tetanus and on this date is still alive, after many hours of near death. If everyone could ask his opinion it would be safe to say he would beg all families to protect themselves from this dreadful disease.

We think nothing of spending money for our necessities or pleasure but seldom think of spending a small amount to protect our children and ourselves from Tetanus or Lockjaw.

Remember, it's very easy to get protection from lockjaw but not so easy to die from lockjaw.
