Inside WASHINGTON MARCH OF EVENTS

New Russian Ambassadors And New Foreign Policy? Recall of Leading Envoys Has Washington Pondering Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—There are increasing signs Russia will replace her ambassadors to the United States and Great Britain, and the big question is: Is it a routine rotation or does it represent a shift in Soviet foreign policy?

Several weeks ago the Kremlin summoned home its ambassadors from Washington, London and Paris. There was no explanation. But the coincidence of the withdrawal of the Red diplomats from the western big three aroused wide speculation of some obscure Russian maneuver. Now, Moscow has announced that its ambassador to France has been replaced by Sergei A. Vinogradov, the Soviet's World War II ambassador to Turkey. Diplomatic circles have become convinced this foreshadows new ambassadors to Washington and London as well. But the significance of the shift still remains a mystery. Most educated guessing centers around the belief that the move has some connection with the spreading revolt against Communism in the European satellites.
Some sources go so far as to speculate any new Soviet envoys will bring to their posts a changed diplomatic "line" designed to ease East-West tensions, liberalize life in the iron curtain countries and slow down mounting free world pressures against Communism—all moves to quell anti-Communist riots that have made headlines.

GIANT "WHIRLYBIRD"—The civil aviation world is waiting expectantly for the flight of the first commercially feasible passenger helicopter, expected to hop into the air at the Piasecki factory in the fall.
The giant 44-passenger "whirlybird" is being readied now for its first flight tests. Late this summer it will undergo static ground tests.
Designed the XH-16 for the Air Force, for whom it will be produced, the rotary-winged craft is equal in size to a DC-4 and is expected to be used primarily as a troop carrier.
However, civil aviation experts predict that when it comes up for civilian use it will find a great market in replacing regular airplanes on flights of less than 300 miles. Such a craft could cut actual flying times between comparatively close metropolitan areas by at least one-third.

FOOD WEAPON—It may prove futile, but the administration intends to plump hard for President Eisenhower's request that he be given sweeping authority to send surplus food overseas when famine threatens.
The humanitarian aspects of the request are obvious. The administration will stress the political factors involved.
The issue is more cold war strategy than anything else. Mr. Eisenhower would like to have a free hand in rushing food wherever necessary, not only to feed hungry people but to keep them from turning Communist.

WHITE HOUSE TIMING—Veteran politicians are puzzled at the timing of the recent White House demand for extension of the excess profits tax by a maneuver to by-pass the tax-writing House ways and means committee.
The move, originating in a bill in the rules committee, later was withdrawn. But it left political scars on Capitol Hill which may prove malignant.
The big puzzle is: Why didn't the administration wait until the tax-writing committee was ready to act?
Had the issue been released earlier from July 1, most of the attack would have been taken from the tax-cutting advocates, led by Rep. James Reed (R), New York, chairman of the ways and means committee.
Instead, the administration tried to shove the excess profits tax through without revealing the nature of the problem. Now the extension probably will go through, but at the expense of making an enemy.

Mrs. Layton Cochran and son have returned to their home in Robersonville following a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Red Kornegay. She was accompanied by her mother and Miss Bessie Kornegay.
Mrs. W. H. Jones attended Home Coming Day at the Mills home at Thomasville, Sunday.
Mrs. Bessie Williams is a patient in a Kinston Hospital.
Mr. Jimmy Johnson who with his parents, is at Statesboro, Georgia, during the tobacco season, spent the week end at his home.
Miss Hilda Lee of Washington, N. C. spent the week end at her home in Pink Hill.
Mr. Paschall Taylor and daughter of Richlands, visited in Pink Hill Sunday afternoon.
Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Perry and children of Kinston were guests of Mrs. Perry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Turner, Sunday.

The Johnny Watlings from Reidsville spent the week end with the H. D. Maxwell family at Maxwell's Mill.
Mr. and Mrs. Preston Sheppard entertained this week-end one of their Seattle, Washington, friends, Mr. Clyde R. Bellows, now of Parrah, Mexico. Mr. Bellows has just returned from an inspection trip in South Africa for a mining company, of which he is chief geologist. He made the brief air flight from New York City to Raleigh-Durham Airport to spend the two days with the Sheppards.

(The following story was released by the Associated Press)
Clinton, Iowa, July 28 (AP)—The wife of 92-year-old Dr. John D. Hullinger today gave birth to an 11-pound boy at the family home here.
Dr. Hullinger announced the birth of his first son to his 32-year-old wife and nurse. The doctor who delivered the baby himself listed the time of birth as 30 seconds past 12:48 a. m.
Smiling proudly, Dr. Hullinger said he "lived through it."
"I didn't need any tonic or stimulants to do the job," he added.
Both Mrs. Hullinger and the baby are doing nicely, the doctor said. "My wife is modest and I'm hysterical," he added.
Dr. Hullinger has taken in stride the publicity attending the event. He is the second Iowa man of over 90 to attain fatherhood in recent months. Last December 93-year-old Luis Carrizales of Des Moines and his 28-year-old wife Mary celebrated the arrival of their sixth child since they were married in 1943.
Dr. Hullinger first disclosed that an heir was on the way when he held a St. Patrick's Day program to observe the 51st anniversary of his entry into medical practice in

It is now time to make plans for planting and to make selections of spring flowering bulbs. They may be planted any time in September, October or November. There are many kinds to choose from including tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and Dutch iris. Of these, there are many varieties and a wide range of colors to suit the fancy of any individual gardener. By selecting your varieties you may extend the blooming season over a period of several weeks. That is especially true of daffodils. In sandy or loose soils bulbs may be planted a little deeper than in the light clay soils. Daffodils (narcissus) should be planted six to seven inches deep in sandy loam, tulips and Dutch iris about five inches deep, hyacinths about five to six inches and crocus about two inches. Any good garden fertilizer may be used. It should be put into the soil where the bulbs are to be planted but should not come into contact with the bulbs.
There are many different types of narcissus—commonly called daffodils or jonquils. Some have small flat flowers, others have very large flowers with large yellow or white trumpets. Be sure to plant some of the "Golden Harvest" variety. It is one of the best of the early mammoth yellows. "Beersheba" and "Roxanne" are popular large whites, and "Twink" is a good double flowered variety.
The Darwin type of tulip is probably the best for the average gardener because of its long stems and wide range of colors. However, some of the other types give excellent results for the person who wants something different.
Dutch iris should be planted in September or early October. The leaves will come out before winter sets in but this is natural so do not be alarmed. They will withstand our winters with very little damage.
