In closing the funeral service Mrs. Morton's favorite song "The Lord's Prayer" was sung by Henry West.

When she began a girl, a bride and the crown of Motherhood over There are lots of faults and mistakes she made, And many wrong she did On this work of hers. But she paid with bitter tears She hid. There is joy, love and pleasure And happiness you will find In this work of hers you will treasure. For she was very kind She cared for new born babies Her hand soothed the aching head She fed the helpless and the aged And helped to shroud the dead. But Mothers work away It is finished you see And when you look at it again, There will be just a fond memory.
