Negro Farmers Advised To Attend Short Course at A&T

If you want to know something about a cow, attend the Annual Dairy Short Course at A. and T. College is the advice offered by Charlie Hall of Rt. 1, Beulaville who recently attended such an event.
Hall figured those two days were needed as a rest from his daily farm chores and catch a few naps in between but as it turned out, two days of deep study or ways of how the new enterprise could be fitted into his farm pattern.
Giving due consideration to the present situation of an over supply of milk, Hall figures that getting more people to drinking milk is the ultimate aim now of the dairy industry.
Sam Miller of Warsaw was attending the conference for the second year, but with no less enthusiasm than the first. With Miller, it was a case of meeting old farmers and keeping abreast with dairy developments.
The North Carolina Producers Association sponsored a Banquet on February 4 for those in attendance. The banquet was highlighted by an inspirational message by Mr. E. R. Little, manager of the North Carolina Milk Producers Association.
Subjects discussed were: Financing Dairy Enterprises, Feeding, Managing, Marketing, Dairy Products, Trends, Breeding, Sanitation.
The Short Course is under the direction of Mr. R. L. Wynn, Negro Dairy Specialist, by R. E. Wilkins, Negro County Agent.

Local Negro Teams Take Wins

Household Hint
Slight scorch marks made on clothing during ironing may be removed with a five-cent piece. Spread the fabric taut on the ironing board, and rub the scorched portion with the coin.

The gladiolus is one of our most satisfactory garden flowers. It is an excellent cut flower and makes a conspicuous show of color in the garden. Also, it is easy to grow. Gladiolus will succeed in any good garden soil that is well drained and where they may be well watered. The fact that we plant well developed corns, or bulbs, instead of having to nurse seedling plants makes them much easier to handle for the average gardener. A succession of blooms may be had by planting every three or four weeks during the season beginning in February in eastern North Carolina and continuing until July.
In sandy soil the corns should be planted about five inches deep and six inches apart in the row in clay soils four inches and six inches apart in the row. Fertilization should be moderate with any good grade garden fertilizer and care should be taken that none of the fertilizer comes into contact with the bulb.
Select nice plump bulbs - free from any disease spots. Most of the bulbs offered for sale are of the large sizes but with our long seasons the medium and small sizes will also give nice blooms.
There are hundreds of good varieties. The following are dependable and beautiful:
White - Florence Nightingale, Snow Princess, White shades - Margaret Boston, Corona; Pink and Rose - Pleadry, Ethel Cave Cole, Spic and Span, Rosa van Lima; Lavender - Elizabeth the Queen; Yellow - Spotlight; Red - Red Charm, Valeria; Blue - Blue Beauty; Orange - Pactus, Orange Gold; Deep rose - Burns.
Fortunately, there is only one pest that gives us much trouble on the gladiolus in the garden and that is the gladiolus thrip, a small sucking insect. It causes light streaks on the foliage and a deforming of the blooms. If noticed in time, thrips can be controlled with a dust or spray of 5 per cent DDT.
