We're Marching to Zion

A boy raises the ire of his father

Deacon Enoch Watts picked up a stick: Every time he had told his scrawny little son to do something the boy had replied with a rhyme. Every dime he asked Isaac a question, the boy came back with an answer all rhymed out.

That had been going on ever since the dwarfilike ugly youth wrote a 14-line poem when he was 7 years old Now Isaac was in his teens and the Deacon had had enough. He was going to break the boy of rhyming his every day conversation or flaif the daylights out of him.

Watts Sr. advanced menacingty with his stick, it isaac raised his arm and shrugged away. The Deacon raised the stick, Isaac cried out, "O father do some pity take, and I will no more verses make!" History does not record what happened next.

But, whatever happened, Isaac Watts was still alive on a Sunday in 1692 when he attended a Non-Conformist Church in Southampton with his father. He was 18 then. Everybody sang the Psalms that Y Sunday... everybody, that is, except Isaac Watts, "Why didn't you sing the Psalms?" the old man demanded after the church service. "Because they he don't rhyme, that's why," the rebellious youth replied. Then write something that does rhyme if you think you're smarter than King David, the staid old descen bellowed. Isaac Watts accepted the challenge. That afternoon he wrote:

Behold the glories of the Lamb Amidst his Father's throne;
Prepare new honors for his name,
And songs before unknown.

During the week he finished his first hymn. The following Sunday he gave it to the church clerk and the clerk read it, line by line, while the congregation sang after him. Isaac Watts had to bring in a rhymed-out song every Sunday for two years.

In 1707 Watts collected his "hymns of human composure" into a book titled "Hymns and Spiritual Songs." Other editions followed. In all, he wrote 650 hymns. ... mostly paraphrases of the Psalms.

The die was cast And Isaac Watts had gone down in history as "The Father of the English Hymn."
Thus we sing "hymns of human composure" today. But we might still be singing the Psalms had not a scrawny little five-foot youth raised the ire of his father 2½ centuries ago. This is one of Watts' first hymns.

Come, we that love the Lord, And let our joys be known, Join in a song with sweet accord, And thus surround the throne.

Let those refuse to sing
Who never knew our God;
But children of the heavenly King,
May speak their joys abroad.

The hill of Zion yields A thousand sacred sweets

Before we reach the heavenly fields, Or walk the golden streets.

Then let our songs abound, And every tear be dry, We're marching thro' Immanuel's ground, To fairer worlds as high.

WHAT Christ prayed for, we have a right to pray for. This is not to say that we can, so to speak, simply quote his prayers after him and sign our name in place of his. He prayed for objects for which we need not now pray, as when he prayed for Simon Peter.

Pray for Others

Lesson for April 4, 1954

But the kind of thing for which h

to pass on a few thoughts suggested by this prayer of Christ, especially with regard to praying for other people. Intercessory prayer in the true sense is always unselfish, though one may literally pray for other persons with a selfish motive. For instance, if a woman whose husband is a candidate for office prays for his election, that is praying for some one else, right enough; but maybe she is saying one word for him and two for herself. So an ambitious mother might pray that her child would make good in Hollywood. (-and bring home the bacon.) This is not intercessory prayer in the Christian sense. Christ's prayer for others shows that he deeply and completely desired their highest good. But he does not offer this prayer in silence and solitude, He prays in their hearing, they knew they were on his heart. We cannot always pray in the presence of those for whom we pray; but it does them great good to know w are carrying them on our hearts before God. No service of friend or loved one is more cherished than the simple yet sublime serv-

It Should Be for the Best

Prayer for others should be for the best-and this in two senses. It should be in line with God's best purposes, and it should be for the best things. When Christ prayed in Gethsemane that the cup might pass from him, the prayer was not granted, because what God willed would not be possible, or would not have been possible, if Christ had not been willing to drink that bitter cup to the dregs. God will not grant requests that upset his plans, no matter how earnest and apparently right the requests may be. But prayer for others ought to be for the best things. Not that we should not pray for lesser things. It surely is not wrong to pray that mother may find her wedding ring that got lost in the laundry, or that Uncle Harry may get over his cold. But surely as we grow more mature in the Christian life we can begin to appreciate the kind of prayer that Christ offered for his friends. He did not pray there at the Last Supper for their health, long life or "prosperity." He prayed for their inner spirits, he prayed for their unity of heart, for their vision of God. How often we pray for something to happen to our loved ones, how seldom do we pray for them! When a child lay dying of rabies, hundreds of prayers went up for his recovery. These were not granted. But other prayers were offered for his parents faith; and these were granted.

"Nothing you ask will be de-nied," a popular hymn says. But the Bible does not promise that. Jesus never promised it. What is promised, and what is true, is that the more our prayers harmonize with the will of the God of Love, the more surely they will find an-swer. Now we often pray for our friends, as we do for ourselves, that God will help them do what they want to do, or get what they want to have, or get rid of what depresses or pains them. Give them what they want! is our cry. (Many of us are too selfish even to get that far in praying for others.) But there is no guarantee that God will give all men, or any man, ex-actly what he wants. This poor world would be in a much worse mess than it is, if God simply actions, the dat everybody's dictation. The best we can ask for those we love is that they may learn to desire what God himself desires.
