Make Accessories To Your Own Liking

If you enjoy being original and using your own creative streak, you'll find lots of enjoyment in making many of your own clothing accessories.

According to Mary Em Lee, State College extension clothing specialist, accessories that show good taste are often way out of line as far as price is concerned. By making your own you'll have a lot of fun and at the same time save yourself considerable expense.

Miss Lee says that you can find any number of patterns for attractive neckwear, bags, hats, and gloves at most department stores. Next time you are browsing through pattern books, pay special attention to the accessory sections.

Accessories are very expressive of certain moods and personalities, explains Miss Lee. They can be dressy, tailored, feminine, exotic and very dramatic according to the wishes of the wearer. Accessories can completely change the character of the suit or dress - they can "dress it up" or "dress it down" as the occasion dictates.

The use of artificial flowers as an accessory comes and goes with the seasons. This spring, artificial flowers are abundant - they're even being fashioned into earrings. Here again you can save money by making your own. Plant these earrings to go with a specific dress or outfit.

Artificial flowers for spring and summer wear are most effective if light in color. They will harmonize well with the newer pastel fabrics.

A genius nowadays is the man who always has enough money for whatever is necessary.

One reason the dollar buys less is that it has more to buy.

I have had several phone calls during the past week asking me when I am going to plant my dahlias and what to do about dahlias that were left in the ground over winter and are now sending up stems.

If you grew dahlias last year and left them in the ground over winter they should be dug up now and divided. Even if you want only one plant, divide the clump, plant one division and give the others away.

Good Feathering Brings Top Price

Mr. Poultryman, are your broilers going to "feather out well?"

The question is put by R. S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry science department at N. C. State College and dean of the Tar Heel poultry industry. It is an important question, especially at this time of the year.

Dearstyne says, "Not only must the broiler be well-finished, it must also be completely feathered to bring a top market price." When broilers fail to feather well the inevitable question occurs: "Why?" Too often, says Dearstyne, the blame is placed on the diet. This is seldom the reason. The ability to feather fully is primarily an inherited characteristic and traces back to the breeding program in the flock from which the hatching eggs were secured. Management of the broiler is very important as managerial errors may retard feather growth. The producer should avoid over crowding of houses, overheating, chilling, and severe fluctuation of brooder temperature. It should also be borne in mind that some humidity is required for normal feathering. Other factors such as disease and certainly outbreaks of cannibalism may depress normal feathering. Producers should purchase chicks from sources where complete feathering is an established factor, says Dearstyne. Cheap chicks sold at less cost than the price of hatching eggs are not usually a good source of rapid feathering birds. North Carolina hatcheries have furnished good broiler chicks in the past. Price and quantity being equal, it is well to buy as near at home as practical, advises the poultry expert.

Leaving the clump in the ground will give you several main stems, a lot of early flowers and usually poor flowers in the fall when they ought to be at their best.

In digging the clump be careful not to break the necks of the tuberous roots. Some varieties have very slender necks. In dividing the clump, which is best done with a long slender blade, you must leave at least one bud or eye on each root with each division. You will find the buds on the main stem or at the base of the stem - not on the root itself. If long sprouts have developed they may be cut back to about one-half inch of the stem or eye. Usually you can get from three to five divisions from each clump. These divisions may be planted now or can be kept in a cool place, covered with peat moss or dry sand until the proper planting time.

I rarely plant before May 1 here at Raleigh. My advice would be to plant during early May in the central and western portions of the state, and about May 25 to June 1 in the extreme eastern portion of the state.

How can you grow large dinner plate size dahlias? You must buy varieties which naturally grow large. There are hundreds of varieties ranging in size from one to 17 inches in diameter. Culture and shading will increase size to a limited extent, but if you want the big ones you must buy the proper kinds.

North Carolina grain dealers are expected to organize a statewide trade association in the near future. The value of cattle and calves on North Carolina farms shrank almost 30 per cent during 1953 in spite of a 5 per cent numerical gain.
