Health For All

Bore Yourself To Sleep
The dog, the cat, the baby in the crib—how do they spend most of their time? Sleeping. It's so easy for them to drop off anywhere, anytime. Then why can't you sleep whenever you wish? It's probably because you're so intelligent. It was quite an achievement when man got smart enough to stay awake two thirds of the time. New born infants, like the lower animals, wake only when stimulated by hunger, pain, fear, or some other primitive urge. When their needs are satisfied, they go back to sleep. As the brain develops, the baby becomes more and more aware of what goes on around him. There are many more sensations to keep him awake. And when he becomes an adult with a fully developed brain, life can be so very stimulating that sometimes he just can't sleep. The type of insomnia that afflicts almost everyone once in a while results from over-stimulation. You get into a political discussion, and when you go to bed you lie awake thinking up perfect arguments. Or you have an important job to do tomorrow, and you worry about

Survivors Of Wage Earners May Qualify

Many survivors of wage-earners who died between June 30, 1940 and September 1, 1950 who were unable to qualify for Social Security benefits under the law existing at that time may now be entitled under the liberalized 1954 amendments, according to N. A. Avera, District Manager of the Wilmington, N. C. Social Security Administration Office. It was explained that many wage-earners died between these dates without having worked under Social Security a long enough time to establish credits sufficient to provide benefits for survivors under requirements of the law at that time. For instance, a wage-earner who died in January, 1950, was that needed to have worked in employment covered by the Social Security at least one-half the total number of calendar quarters which had elapsed since January 1, 1937 in order for his survivors to be entitled to monthly benefits. As an example, the requirements for a wage-earner who died in January, 1950, was that he have 26 quarter years of work credits, this number being one-half of the total 52 quarter years which had elapsed in the thirteen years, of four quarters each, which had passed since January 1, 1937. The recent amendments liberalized requirements for survivors of wage-earners who died between June, 1940, and September, 1950, to provide eligibility if the wage-ear-

How you'll do it. Or you are in a strange bed. Or you drank too much strong coffee.

If you have trouble getting to sleep, try boring yourself. An occasional evening with dull company or a dull book will be helpful. Take a cup of warm milk or similar innocuous beverage before retiring. Establish a bedtime routine of insignificant chores to slow down the activity of your brain. Music may help, if it is pleasant but uninteresting. Be sure not to confuse annoyance with boredom. People or things that annoy you are stimulating rather than soporific. The main thing is to get into the habit of sleeping. There's no need to worry about losing sleep occasionally, but chronic insomnia is very serious and may require a doctor's help. had at least six quarters of coverage at the time of his death. Applications must be made by survivors to obtain benefits. Eligible persons include widows, unmarried children still under 18 years of age, or dependent parents. Avera pointed out that since claims representing only eighteen beneficiaries under this type case have been received in the past ten days, there are many survivors of wage-earners who died between the dates specified who should make inquiry regarding their present eligibility for benefits.
