Congress Appropriates Funds For The Drainage, Navigation, Flood Control

Fund appropriated by Congress for drainage, navigation and flood control projects in Coastal North Carolina for the current fiscal year total two and a half times the sum allotted for last year, reports Colonel R. L. Hill, District Engineer of the Wilmington District, Corps of Engineers.

The Congress has allotted some $2,514,500 for new work and maintenance for the year ending next June 30. Last year the District was given $1,130,250. This latter sum included only one new work project—$195,000 to aid in developing a drainage district of 12,500 acres of land at Fairfield in Hyde County. This money, however, was carried over to the current year because local interests at Fairfield could not get together on certain conditions relating to operation and maintenance of the project. Land owners have been asked to agree to an assessment of so much an acre to carry on the project. Some are willing and others are not.

The total for this year includes $1,036,000 for maintaining navigable waters and the operating of five bridges and three locks. The remainder, $1,478,500, includes $500,000 for the beginning of deepening Wilmington Harbor from 32 feet to 34 feet, and $21,400 for surveying the upper reaches of the Cape Fear River.

It also includes $120,000 for flood control work on the Pasquotank River, $83,000 for increasing the depth of Tylors Creek at Besuort from seven to 12 feet and widening the channel from 75 to 100 feet, $102,000 for a breakwater and dredging at Oriental and $108,000 for deepening and widening Bardsen Inlet from five to 12 feet and 75 feet to 100 feet respectively. In addition to these, $175,000 has been earmarked to improve Rollinson Channel at Hatteras, $107,000 for Wallace Channel at Ocracoke Inlet and $55,000 (maintenance) to restore the Intracoastal Waterway at Core Creek to 12 feet. The latter area is subject to severe shoaling.

Final plans are being rushed to get all of these projects underway during the current fiscal year.

Fishing interests and other users of the Intracoastal Waterway are advised that Hurricanes Connie and Diane imposed little if any damage on the route between Little River, S. C. and the Neuse River; the area in the path of the storms, the Corps of Engineers reports.

A survey party with sounding gear examined this stretch of the waterway immediately after the storms passed and reported no obstructions were found, a few aids (markers) to navigation were blown away and shoaling at only three points. Shoals leaving a scant 10 feet of depth were located near New River, the Pamlico and Tar Rivers, the latter at a point where they emerge from Snows Cut to join the Cape Fear River. Surveyors say it is normal for shoals to recur at these places and they doubt that Connie and Diane are to blame.

Three key members of the District staff have been assigned to the New England Division at Boston, Massachusetts for "Operation Noah" emergency work in connection with the flood stricken area. Lt. Col. John H. Jackson, Assistant District Engineer, George W. McWhite, Mechanical Engineer, and Clarence W. Madison, Auditor, left last week by air for 30 to 60 days special restoration work.
