Weekly Tobacco Report
Eastern North Carolina Flue Cured
A few more losses than gains occurred in grade averages for Eastern North Carolina flue-cured tobacco during the past week. Quality of marketings showed a slight improvement when compared with offerings of the preceding week. The Federal - State Market News Service reports gross sales for the week ending September 27 totaled $3,310,512 for an average of $55.46 per hundred. This was the highest average of the season—up 31 cents from the week before. Season sales were raised to 280,927,630 lbs., for a $54.12 average. During the comparable period last year 343 million pounds averaged $52.18. Changes in grade averages were mostly $1.00 to $2.00 per hundred pounds. A little over one third of the grades declined, while the number gains and those unchanged were about equal. A small increase was noted in the percentage of better quality tobacco. The proportion of leaf was smaller, while more lugs and cutters were on the floors. Low to good leaf, fair and good lugs and low cutters made up the bulk of sales. The Stabilization Corporation received nearly 9 per cent of gross sales for the week — the highest percentage of the year. Season receipts under the Government loan program were a little over 5 per cent. Wendell will operate with one set of buyers instead of two, beginning Monday, September 30.

honey crop is a big one. Consequently, homemakers who are not acquainted with the merits of honey in the preparation of tasty dishes can plan to experiment with honey while those who use honey often will find ample supplies to fill their needs. There are several different forms in which honey is marketed, but three fourths of it is sold as extracted honey, Mrs. Uzzle explains. The four major forms of honey as listed by Mrs. Uzzle are: 1. Extracted honey is liquid honey removed from the comb and is usually sold in glass jars. 2. Comb honey is honey still in the honeycomb and is sometimes sold in the wooden frames as taken from the beehives. 3. Chunk honey is a combination of comb and liquid honey. It consists of pieces of combs with extracted honey poured over them. 4. Creamed honey, also known as granulated honey, is a product made from extracted honey which has been caused to granulate in minute crystals giving it a creamy texture and a semi-solid but soft consistency. The U. S. Department of Agriculture lists five variations of honey color as being water white, extra white, extra light amber, amber, and dark. Like all other sweets, honey is an energy producing food. Extracted honey is about one fifth water. If it were not for this, a pound of honey would have practically the same energy value as a pound of granulated sugar. Honey is a pleasant source of readily available energy for growing children. Since bacteria which cause diseases in human beings cannot live in honey, it is considered safe and wholesome. Use honey in your meals to provide that extra energy your family needs. A fool always finds some greater fool to admire him. —Boileau Education is the apprenticeship of life. —Willmot
