Need Foster Home

or some other cause; parents' neglect or abandonment of children; children emotionally disturbed; children mentally or physically handicapped; children with behavior problems. Some children need this care temporarily while permanent plans are being made for their more permanent care. In some cases children remain in foster homes while being studied for adoption. In other cases children need relatively long-time care.
How did the Randall home become the State's 1000th foster home - and what sort of a home is it?
Upon Mrs. Randall's request to the county department of public welfare, Miss Guynelle Gentry of the department staff visited the Randall home. She saw the pleasant living room and met Mr. Randall. The home was neat and the equipment adequate, her report showed. But more than this her report reflected the fact that there was a love of children and the setting for good care and happy relationships between foster parents and children.
The county sanitarian tested the water from the soundly constructed well with its power driven pump. Milk from the neighbor's cows was found to be satisfactory. Fire hazards were considered by the local fire department and the home approved on safety factors.
Mrs. Randall knows much about home life with children for she was one of eleven children. Mr. Randall was one of four children. Both are in good health. Both take an active part in the church and community life. Many a neighbor child has found the Randall home a pleasant place to visit.
So the Randalls made application for the license which permits them to care for not more than four children under 16 years of age at one time. Not more than two children may be under two years of age as of the first of the children to be cared for by the Randalls. The baby has as pretty a pink and white crib as perhaps any child in North Carolina, but what is more the baby is being given a chance in life it would not otherwise have - all because of the Randalls and the foster home program of North Carolina.
Many homes such as this first 1000 are needed in the State according to Dr. Winston.
Mrs. Taylor, Superintendent of public welfare in Duplin County says there is a great need in this county for such homes, white and colored, and that she or any member of her staff will be glad to discuss this with any person who is interested.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA GOVERNOR'S OFFICE RALEIGH
April 1, 1958

STATEMENT BY GOVERNOR LUTHER H. HODGES
The thirteenth annual observance of National Home Demonstration Week will be held May 4-10, 1958. The theme this year will be "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World."
Participating in the annual observance will be home demonstration club women from the United States, Alaska, Puerto Rico and Hawaii.
There are a total of 64,000 home demonstration club members in North Carolina, and their valuable program is Adult Education in home economics and related fields. Through the years they have broadened their program to include citizenship, recreational relations, publicity, education, health and safety, recreation, and music. The last four are carried cooperatively with the Board of Health, State Library, Recreation Commission, and State Supervisor of Music.
We are proud of our state-wide home demonstration program, and in recognition of its leadership, achievements and objectives, I am happy to designate the week of May 4-10, 1958 as NATIONAL HOME DEMONSTRATION WEEK IN NORTH CAROLINA and call it to the attention of all our people.

She is survived by three sons Marvin Houston of the home, Ernest Houston of Dahlgreen, Va., and Luke Houston of Newport News Va. Four grandchildren.

Tar Heel Poultry Industry Has Room For Expansion; New Law Will Help Here
While great strides have been made in recent years there remains considerable room for expansion of North Carolina's booming poultry industry. The industry in Georgia, for example, is about two and one-half times larger than in this state.
Broilers alone in Georgia are worth $150 million a year to farmers in North Carolina the figure is $68 million. But North Carolina has an opportunity to close the gap.
Clayton P. Libeau, poultry and egg marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says the federal poultry products inspection act, which will require that all poultry and poultry products moving between states after January 1, 1959 be inspected for wholesomeness, should assist North Carolina in its race to expand poultry marketings.
Libeau explains that consumers of poultry are buying more and more built-in conveniences and services such as whole drawn birds ready to eat and ice-packed. Many are remanding halves, quarters, and cut-up parts in boxes and trays. All of this means that more labor is being added to the finished product. And cheap labor is one of North Carolina's greatest resources, add Ed Libeau. The new inspection law provides a great opportunity for North Carolina to "export more of this great resource in the form of attractively packaged poultry."
North Carolina, in general, can ship processed poultry products to the large population centers of New England about a third of a cent cheaper than its strongest competitors in Georgia and Alabama, according to Libeau.

THIS WEEK

With Clinton Davidson
Washington this week is moving slowly toward a Summit Conference later this year with about as much enthusiasm as a small boy about to enter a haunted house.
"We know that the Russians are baiting a trap for us," a veteran diplomat told us, "but the lure of even the remotest possibility of an easing of the cold war is irresistible."
The trap that Nikita Khrushchev has so cleverly set for us is the most powerful in the world. The jaws of adverse public opinion can crush any nation. The bait is promises of peace.
The Russian objective is to convince as many nations as possible, as well as the Russian people, that the Communist Bloc wants peace, and that it is the capitalistic nations that are the warmongers.
President Eisenhower interprets Russian demands for a Summit meeting as a trick to inflame world opinion against the U.S. Secretary Dulles sees it as another phase in the Communist plan for world domination.
Both credit Khrushchev with being sincere in his desire to avoid a hydrogen-atomic bomb war, but only if he can achieve world conquest by other means.
Russia has a potent weapon which Washington fears far more than the hydrogen bomb or the ICBM. The communists did not invest propaganda, but they are the most skilled and ruthless users of the "big lie" in the world today. The Summit Conference demand is a master propaganda stroke.
That Khrushchev wants is something for nothing. He has the advantage of knowing that the West will bargain in good faith and that it will keep any promises made. Khrushchev is hampered by no such scruples.
"The American representatives at the conference," a former U. S. envoy to Moscow told us, "had better wear both a belt and suspenders. Either way, we still are likely to lose our shirt."
One of the things that bothers Washington most is the remarkable and ominous similarity between the tactics of Khrushchev and German dictator Adolf Hitler. The parallel is almost as if we were turning back the pages of history.
Hitler dreamed his mad dream of world domination, and so does Khrushchev. The record of both is bloody with the ruthless extermination or exile of all internal opposition. Khrushchev, as did Hitler, cloaks his intentions behind a professed desire for peace.
Hitler walked out of the League of Nations, and Khrushchev uses the United Nations as a propaganda sounding board. The Russians have the same underlying spirit of "do as we wish you to do or else."
Twenty years ago Hitler lured Allied government heads to Munich with the promise of a man-to-man settlement of their differences. While he talked of peace he armed furiously for war.
British Prime Minister Sir Neville Chamberlain came away from Munich with the conviction that he had secured a firm promise of "peace in our time." Hitler robbed Western Europe, and perhaps the U.S., of the alertness to danger that might have prevented World War II.
The question Washington is asking itself is: Is history again about to repeat itself?
