ECC To Offer Art Night Classes

East Carolina College will institute in the spring quarter a special program of undergraduate courses to be taught in late afternoon or at night.

Vice President and Dean of Instruction Leo W. Jenkins has just announced that plans for the new program are well underway. Efforts, he said, are being directed toward offering courses, with emphasis upon required courses, which will be of value to undergraduates working toward a degree and to teachers interested in raising their certificates.

Scheduling of a number of courses at hours convenient to people unable to attend classes during the regular school day is expected to benefit many who do not now hold degrees, especially to teachers, Dr. Jenkins explained.

The new series of undergraduate courses will be offered by East Carolina College in addition to the program of graduate work now being given in the afternoon or at night, Dr. Jenkins stated. A large number of teachers and other students who are working toward the master's degree are now participating in this graduate program, he said.

Already announced in the new series of afternoon and night classes for the spring quarter are the following courses for undergraduates: Application of Science to Industry and Commerce, Geography of Canada, Advanced English Grammar and Composition, Practices and Procedures in Health for Elementary Schools, Children's Literature, and World History to 1500. In response to demand, other courses may be added.

Further information about the new program of courses may be obtained from Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, Vice President, East Carolina College, Greenville, N. C.
