Tobacco In A Nation's Economy

The tobacco industry helps to sustain the economy of the world's largest democracy, India, as the country advances in the family of free nations. Last year alone it provided employment for 1,600,000 growers and 900,000 curers.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When one puffs a cigarette, one is seldom aware of the role that tobacco plays in the economy of a country. For instance, tobacco provides employment to about 1,600,000 growers and 900,000 curers in India. A substantial earner of export revenue, netting no less than $105 million annually, it brings to the Indian Exchequer by way of foreign exchange earnings $31.5 million every year.

Next only to the U.S.A. and China in tobacco production, India holds fifth position in the world in the export of the commodity. The yearly production is 700 million pounds and the area under cultivation is about one million acres. The total exports which stood at a mere 21.9 million pounds valued at less than $21 million annually during the triennium in 1942-43—1944-45, rose to 101.7 million pounds valued at nearly $31.5 million in 1959-60. More than 75 per cent of the exports consists of flue-cured Virginia, used in the cigarette manufacture, grown mainly in Andhra Pradesh which accounts for approximately 35 per cent of the country's total production and produces just over 95 per cent of the Virginia flue-cured tobacco.

No less than 40 different countries import Indian tobacco, the United Kingdom being the largest importer ever. Exports of tobacco are statutorily controlled by the Government to ensure that only the best quality tobaccos are exported. To give encouragement to the exporter, the Government has set up a Tobacco Export Promotion Council. Also, tobacco has been included as one of the items of export in trade agreements made with several countries.

More than 80 per cent of the country's total tobacco production is used internally to feed about 20 cigarette factories at home. The pace of production in these factories has been showing an upward trend. From 26,000 million cigarettes in 1956-57, the production figure rose to 32,000 million in 1959-60.

is spending this week with relative in Smith's township.

Poultry Prices Predicted For First Half '62

August-December farm turkey prices are expected to average 20-21 cents, compared with 25.3 cents for the same period of 1960, predicted Dr. William R. Henry of North Carolina State College.

Dr. Henry is one of four top college poultry economists who make up the National Poultry Survey Committee. Work of the committee, is sponsored by the American Feed Manufacturers' Association, the Poultry and Egg National Board and the National Turkey Federation.

U. S. farm broiler prices in the first half of 1962 would be 15 cents or higher if placements continue no more than 4-6 per cent above year-earlier levels, says Dr. Henry. "But unsatisfactory industry returns can be expected if placements return to levels well above this 4-6 per cent rate of increase," he warns.

U. S. farm egg prices are expected to average 32-33 cents during the first half of 1962, 2-3 cents below the same period of 1961.
