United States Considerably in Cold War

The successful result of the earth by Adolph Hitler will have a marked effect on the cold war. I think it has spoiled the morale of the free peoples. The worst thing about Hitler's achievement was the fact that his whole work was given the opportunity to witness it at a time when it was not known whether it would be a success or a failure. All Americans share in their admiration for a man who has now been added to the list of great American heroes. URBAN AFFAIRS DEFEAT - The plan to set up a Department of Urban Affairs met with a crushing defeat in the House last week by a vote of 164 to 160. Those who observed the handling of the bill felt that the political overtones of the bill may have increased the margin of its defeat. However, in my judgment, there were sound reasons for adverse vote. These reasons might well be stated again in the face of statements by proponents that the plan will surely pass at another session of Congress. I believe that the establishment of the new Department would be unwise because the creation of such a department cannot be harmonized with the existing governmental system in the United States. Municipalities are created by state law. They are political subdivisions of the state. They have no powers and no obligations other than those prescribed by the laws of the states in which they are located. This central government ought not to establish a Federal department based on the theory that I should by-pass the states to deal directly with political subdivisions of the state. Second the problems of municipalities are essentially local problems and ought to be solved at the local level. If a Federal Department is established to deal with local rather than national problems, the inevitable result will be to impair, if not destroy, local initiative, self-reliance, and responsibility. Third, the United States has a national debt which is substantially larger than the combined national debts of all other nations on earth. Congress is being asked to raise the debt limit to $493 billion at the present time. The demand for the new department is essentially promoted by the largest municipalities of the country for the purpose of transferring most of their financial problems to the Federal Treasury. The far reaching demands which will be promoted by the new department will lead to a raid on the Treasury for the benefit of our largest municipalities. Fourth, the value of a Cabinet to the President and the country arises out of the fact that it furnishes to the President a small compact well-functioning group of advisers. If the Cabinet is converted into a convention consisting of the heads of numerous departments, the value of a Cabinet will be destroyed. Fifth, within the bounds of constitutional government and the free enterprise system most of the problems in this field are already handled by the Housing and Home Finance Agency and by agencies of the government now in existence. The solution to problems does not depend on the creation of a new department. In my judgment it does not increase the wisdom of government officials to change the title of the agency in which they work. History has shown, however, that changes of this nature do add greatly to the cost. Stare of Harvard has to say on the subject. "A lot of people are running around the country trying to scare us about our food. To hear them talk, it's a wonder we aren't dead-or at least sick. The poisons are not in the food and water but in the pers and tongues of those who, by peddling misinformation, half-truths, statements out of context and downright falsehoods, gain temporary notoriety, inflate their egos and make a profit, or hope to." Dr. Stare continues, "As a physician and student of nutrition for the last 25 years, let me state categorically that I do not know, nor have I ever heard, of one single case of ill health in man shown to be due to adding approved additional chemicals to foods. And I say additional chemicals because I wish to emphasize that all foods are chemicals." He adds that our own bodies are also composed of chemical which is true - water, protein, fats, etc.

CAPITAL KNOWLEDGE By W. N. Bill Taylor Assistant Vice President UNITED STATES OF AMERICA Washington, District of Columbia, is the seat of government. The District covers about 70 square miles on the northeast side of the Potomac River and is 38 miles southwest of Baltimore, Md. President George Washington was authorized to select the site for the capital. In 1791, Major Pierre Charles L'Enfant, a French engineer, was employed to draw up plans for the capital city. This he did in such a far-seeing way that Washington is today one of the most beautiful cities in the world. Congress held its first session in the new capital in December, 1800. The first President to be inaugurated in Washington was Thomas Jefferson. Today the city covers the entire district, and is governed by three commissioners who are appointed by the President.
