ABOUT OVEN TEMPERATURES

In the old days the cook stuck her hand in the oven to feel the temperature. Today the modern cook doesn't have to guess at the temperature of her oven, because in the cases of electric ranges there is oven heat control.

However, those cooks whose ovens do not have heat control they should purchase a tested, proven oven thermometer which obviously will not control the heat but will help determine the temperature of the oven so that you can lower or increase the amount of heat as needed. These handy oven thermometers are available at most hardware stores or housewares departments in general stores.

If you are going to bake successfully, you will need correct oven temperature and should follow the temperature indicated in the recipe you are using. Many a good cake has been ruined because the oven temperature was not correct.

Once a year, at least, have your oven checked by the utility company, your electrician or yourself, because even the best range needs care.

Study the instructions which came with your range because the people who made it know best how you should treat it for maximum service.

Although modern recipes give exact cooking temperature, it is just as well for you to know what these different temperatures mean:

Very slow - 250-300° F.
Slow - 325° F.
Moderate - 350-375° F.
Moderately Hot - 400° F.
Hot - 425-450° F.
Very Hot - 475-500° F.

Common Causes of Cake Defects

Tunnels: Over mixing; too hot oven; too much flour or wrong kind.

Falls during baking: Too cool oven; too much sugar; too little flour or too much baking powder or soda; too much shortening.

Falls after baking: Insufficient baking.

Runs Over Top of Pan: Too cool oven; too much sugar; too much baking powder or soda; too small pan.

Hard Crust: Too hot oven; baked too long. Falls Apart Coming From Pan: Too cool oven; too much sugar or insufficient baking; improper cooling; too much shortening; too much baking powder or soda; rough handling when taking cake out of pan.

Potters Hill 4-H Plans Full Year

Meetings are held on the last Friday night of each month.

At the meeting held in November to plan the next year's programs, the club members decided they would like to make a tour of the J. P. Stevens Company in Walla. This tour is to be conducted during the month of May and will represent the planned program for that month.

The goal in 1962 is to have all records complete by members and to enter more county 4-H events.

Club officers are: Billy Turner, President; Carol Ann Quinn, Vice-President; Marie Quinn, Secretary; Treasurer; Annie Turner, Reporter; and Kenny Brown, Song Leader.
