THE FLOWER BOX

by Flora Leeds

As a beauty treatment for house plants, smooth leaves may be cleaned by a gentle sponging with clear water. If the leaves are extremely grimy, a little mild soap may be added to the water.

Plants with fuzzy leaves, such as African violets or geraniums, should be brushed from time to time in order to remove any clinging dust. A soft paint brush is good for this.

The Society of American Florists suggests that, while cleaning your house plants, you should check them for pests — mealy bugs, red spiders or scale. First aid for such plant enemies: Simple soap-and-water rinsing will remove red spiders. With mealy bugs, follow the treatment with a cotton-tipped toothpick dipped in alcohol. Scale is easily removed by scraping it off with a fingernail.

When plants become overcrowded in their pots and need transplanting, use a mixture of three parts of good loamy soil and one part organic matter, such as peat moss. There are a number of very good pre-mixed soils on the market which save a great deal of bother. Your florist probably has one or another of them on hand and will advise you of the best for your particular problem.

If you are a novice at indoor gardening, you will find that your local florist can be of invaluable help and advice. Consult him whenever you have a problem. He may have a quick and easy solution to it.
