City Council looks to revitalize downtown

BY ERIN WILTGEN Staff Writer

After looking at a budget that reflected a struggling economy, City Council members turned their attention to revitalizing Thomasville's downtown at the City Council Retreat Saturday.

The retreat, which was held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Ball Park Road Community Center, cused in large part of businesses in the Cha City's historic distric touching on the creation of a special tax distric a potential Privilege I cense and a comprehe sive list of downtow businesses.

"I strongly believe that the economic health of your downtown is a con tributing factor to th economic health of you city," said council men ber Scott Styers. "It's ou job to help that as a cit government."

However, counc agreed that the bulk of the work should fall on special committee ded cated to downtown up keep, perhaps as a branc of the Chamber of Com merce, rather than on th council itself.

"We don't think it's th City's responsibility to de it," Styers said. "That' not the appropriate us of taxpayers' money."

Council members als acknowledged that cit government should tak a role in facilitating downtown development including contributing certain amount of money to the cause.

One method of gov ernment involvemen is to create a special tax ally cause a whole lot of improvement," he said. "But it would certainly be a way for the council to show that their hearts are in the right place."

Besides merely enhancing the appearance of downtown, the council also discussed ways to improve navigation for tourists, such as inserting signs around the Big

Chair pointing to the various businesses.

Part of that project would include formulating a comprehensive listing of current businesses downtown as well as the vacant buildings. This list would not only give the city government an idea of what types of businesses exist but also reveal which buildings are available to new only to those companies companies looking to relocate.

One way to do that is to require businesses to have a Privilege License. Council members discussed implementing both a flat fee and a fee schedule, and council member David Yemm suggested grandfathering the fee in — applying it who relocate to Thomasville now and in the future but not penalizing the ones already here.

But the importance of acquiring such a list transcends the question of fee or no fee, said council member Ron Bratton.

"We just want to know what's in these buildings," Bratton said. "We don't need a fee."

Council deferred the matter to staff research and hopes to revisit the issue in the next two council meetings to have a proposal drafted by May 2010.

district. While actuall levying a property tax of the businesses in the his torical district wouldn' generate enough revenue to justify the measure — raising only $622.9 per one cent tax - Styers said the declared distric would let the council ap ply different rules to those select businesses.

"What it would allow you to do is treat the downtown historic dis trict a little differently in order for them to create their own environment,' he said.

Another use of the spe cial tax district, and the tax system itself, would be to offer tax credits to those businesses that improved their property. said City Attorney Paul Mitchell.

"It might not actu-
