DEMOLITION MEN

Michael and Darrell Waltrip survey the damage they did to the banking in Turn 1 Monday during a groundbreaking ceremony to celebrate the repaving of Daytona International Speedway. The project should be ready by the Daytona 500 next year.

sive coordinator Dickie Cline. An offensive mastermind himself, Cline will have plenty to work with including a backfield full of talent. If Cline can find a wide receiver with the skill set of Brandon Lucas, Thomasville could find the end zone frequently this season.

Playing one of the toughest non-league schedules in the state, Thomasville took its fair share of hits early on, but got it together late in the season to make a deep push in the playoffs. Unfortunately, it was their arch-rivals from Lexington that ended an exciting run, which should only make the returning players hungrier in 2010.

With the same schedule as last year including four straight on the road to open up, THS will be thoroughly tested before they can even get their feet wet. But this team should have more experience, and I expect the Bulldogs to be barking loudly come CCC time.

Ledford enjoyed its first trip through the rigors of the Mid-Piedmont 3-A Conference coming in second, but lost coach Chuck Henderson in the offseason to Asheboro High School.

The administration at the school took its time to find the right replacement, and what they found is someone I have a lot of respect for: Chris Adams, the former Ledford baseball coach, was announced as head coach just a few weeks ago. Having worked with Adams for many years, I became good friends with him. He has always been polite and courteous to the media, and I always got the feeling that he cared passionately about his players.

Whether or not he produces wins is to be determined, but what he will do is push his players to do their best and work to make them better people. Judging by the reception he got at the team meeting where he was announced, he already has the respect of the players.

Across town at East Davidson, head coach Bryan Lingerfelt will bring his same approach to the game and will look to improve on a subpar 2009 season. The Golden Eagles are close to being contenders, but always seem to lack one or two big stars that can change the dynamic of a team. Lingerfelt is a veteran that can get the most out of the talent

he has, and I would not be surprised if EDHS sneaks up on some teams this year and snatches a couple of big victories.
