This Week in History

Sept. 26, 1983

Declaring that a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought, Pres. Ronald Reagan offered to make new proposals to limit medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe and challenged the Soviet Union to make comparable concessions toward an agreement. Reagan told the U.N. General Assembly that if the Soviet make concessions of their own, the U.S. will consider a new ceiling on the number of U.S. missiles in Europe.

Sept. 27, 1988

Six North-West Little League teams, which have withdrawn from the Davidson County Parks and Recreation program, played football and the East Central teams voted to join them to avoid the chaos of litigation involving the county's eligibility rules. A lawsuit, filed in District Court in Lexington Sept. 23 on behalf of 12-year-old Charles Payne, charged the county's eligibility rules treated some 12-year-olds unfairly. The county program was for children ages 9 to 11, however the county had an exception for sixth graders who turned 12 before the Oct. 16 cutoff period. These students could play if they started kindergarten late, but if they started school on time and repeated a grade, they weren't allowed to participate. The eligibility exception was abolished in 1986 due to the problems it caused the department, but players already in the county league were covered by a grandfather clause and allowed to play under the exception.

Sept. 28, 1999

With three months remaining, 1999 was named the deadliest year on America's death row in almost half a century up to that point. Eighteen states executed 76 killers, and the total was projected to reach 100 by the year's end.
