Heaviest Traffic In History Results In 3 Village Wrecks

Traffic Signal Moved From Base For Second Time

Chapel Hill.—Only three traffic accidents serious enough to be reported to authorities occurred here over the weekend, during which Chapel Hill had its heaviest traffic in its history.

State Highway Patrolman Robert R. Thomas stated that "on the whole the crowd here for this year's Duke-Carolina game was the best of any I have ever seen here, and this is the fourth consecutive year that I have helped handle traffic at the annual football classic. The motorists this year deserve a pat on the back for the way they did their driving. There were a few smashed radiators and grills, and a few persons who attempted to pull out of line and pass other cars going in the same direction, but on the whole the drivers were more capable and more careful than in previous years and the game crowd was handled smoothly."

For the second time in two months, the spotlight standard at the intersection of Franklin and Columbia streets was moved from its base. The 1000-pound base was

The day he came home from the Army in the summer of 1944, John L. Caldwell, city manager at that time, died, and Mr. Hinson was elected by a unanimous vote of the board of aldermen in competition with some 35 applicants for the position from all sections of the county.

A native of Monroe, Mr. Hinson has lived in Chapel Hill for the past 25 years and has been connected with the University most of that time. He was graduated from the University with a B.S. degree in engineering in 1921 and an M.S. degree in the school of commerce in 1925. From 1917 to 1925 he was assistant manager of the University Book Exchange and from 1925 to 1935 manager. He was sales manager of the electric and water division in 1936 and was superintendent of University dormitories for the next four years.

A veteran of World War I, Mr. Hinson entered the Army again in 1940 with the rank of captain. After serving in the adjutant-general's office and at staff headquarters at Fort Jackson for two years, he was transferred to Keesler Field, Miss., where he was general mess officer in charge of 52,000 men's food, the buying, cooking and serving. He was commanding officer of the second mess group, which included 17 officers and 859 enlisted men. He was a lieutenant colonel when he was discharged.

Before he left Keesler Field he had a review in his honor, and Col. Robert E. M. Goolrick, commanding officer, presented Col. Hinson with a certificate of commendation signed by the officers and enlisted men of the station.

Reporter Finds Few Plan Elaborate Thanksgiving Day In Survey At Cedar Grove

By Mae V. Lark

Around Cedar Grove last week everyone was looking forward to Thanksgiving, although very few were planning anything really elaborate.

T. L. Oliver was going to close his store and enjoy a day of rest at home.

The school kids were anticipating sleeping late on Thursday morning, as were their teachers.

Hughes Oakley and all the other sportsmen were just waiting for Thanksgiving day to bring the opening of the hunting season.

The turkey was not to play a very important role in the Thanksgiving dinner scene in the Grove this year. However, there were to be many dinners well deserving of a prayer of Thanksgiving.

C. S. Frazier was planning to go to Lynchburg to visit friends, but most of the folks were planning to spend the holiday at home with their families.

Mrs. Myrtle Blackman was looking forward to having her daughter, Ruth, and her nephew, Thomas Jones, home. Ruth is teaching home economics in Wilmington and Thomas is going to school in Charlotte.

The main event on the Luther Boones' Thanksgiving schedule was to be the wedding of their daughter, Nell, to Bob Blevins of Asheville on Wednesday night at the Methodist church in Mebane.

The Aycock PTA was sponsoring a turkey dinner on Wednesday night, which would provide pleasant social activity for many in the community.

The Thanksgiving calendar was to be well filled for Cedar Grove, not with anything grand, but with the simple, little things which make Thanksgiving day significant.

New Election Request Is Not Pressed

James Webb of Hillsboro, named as state senator from Orange and Alamance counties in the general elections November 5, was officially certified by the State Board of Elections in Raleigh Tuesday when no one appeared to press a contention by Charles H. Page of Burlington that the vote should be declared void.

Earlier Page had entered a protest to the vote when his name failed to get on the ballots used in Orange county. In his protest to the State Board of Elections he had asserted that the omission had not been fully explained and that "the State Board of Elections declare the election of my opponent null and void until my election or defeat can be satisfactorily established by the voters of Orange county who had had no opportunity to vote in an election with my name on the ticket."

"REGRETTABLE SITUATION"

Before taking any action in the matter Tuesday, William T. Joyner, chairman of the board, said that no evidence had been presented to show that Page's name had been certified properly to the Orange county board of elections.

Joyner described it as a "regrettable situation," but said, "I don't think this board can fix the blame, since we have no information that Page's name was officially certified."

At the time Page entered his request asking that the vote be declared null and void Republicans in both counties of the 16th district had expressed surprise. Page's first announcement—after the omission had been discovered—was that he would not seek another vote.
