Veterans Information

Disabled veterans are entitled to many federal benefits not available to the non-disabled, according to Veterans' Administration.

Some of these benefits are explained in the following replies to the 10 questions most frequently asked by disabled veterans during a study VA conducted to learn how much they know about the federal program:

Q. What benefits does the disabled veteran receive under the vocational rehabilitation program that are not available to him under the GI bill?

A. The disabled veteran receives several additional benefits under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (public law 16). During his vocational rehabilitation and for two months after his employability has been established, he receives at least $105 if he has no dependents, or $115 if he has a dependent, plus $10 for one child, $7 for each additional child, and $15 for a dependent parent.

Q. Does VA help the disabled veteran get a job after he finishes his training?

A. Yes. Q. What is vocational advisement all about and why is it required under this program?

A. The main purpose of vocational advisement is to determine whether a disabled veteran should train for a profession, or for a particular trade or occupation based on his previous education, experience, personal desires and present ability.

Q. Will the disabled veteran's disability compensation be reduced if he goes into training under this program?

A. No. Q. What happens if the disabled veteran fails in his course under this program?

A. Generally, VA will take special steps to enter him in another course in which there is every likelihood he will complete successfully. The situation depends on the facts and circumstances in each case.

Q. What are the conditions for eligibility under this program?

A. A disabled veteran must have had active service on or after Sept. 16, 1940, and before the official end of the war, with a discharge under conditions other than dishonorable. He also must have a compensable service-connected disability and he must show a need for vocational rehabilitation to overcome the handicap of his disability.

Q. How much VA supervision and assistance does the disabled veteran get in his training?

A. VA training officers inform and assist him in all matters affecting his training. They are continually on the alert for circumstances that might prevent his proper progress and they exert every effort to remove these obstacles.

Q. What is the maximum length of training a disabled veteran can get under this program?

A. The maximum is four years; however, VA may extend the time if factors in any case warrant an additional period for rehabilitation.

Q. What happens if a veteran in training under this program becomes ill or is injured?

A. Under certain conditions, if the veteran is injured, suffers a relapse, or if his disability is further aggravated during his training, he may be granted an increase in the rate of his disability compensation. If he requires hospitalization, it may be furnished at government expense.

Q. Must a disabled veteran go to a vocational school or may he go to a liberal arts college, a high school, or similar institution under this program?

A. He may enroll in any VA-approved educational institution or training establishment offering the course of training which VA has found he needs to insure his proper rehabilitation in line with his own desires.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardul is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

- 1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.
2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes. Try Cardul. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.
